Detroit Derby Hustles
An Inclusive League for Diverse Participants
12th Annual COMMUNITY GALA

Previews two exhibitions, Engaging African Art: Highlights from the Horn Collection and Vanessa German: Miracles and Glory Abound, a spoken word performance by Vanessa German and enjoy a reception with live music, strolling supper, and a cash bar.

For tickets, call 810.234.1695 or visit flintarts.org
This specific point in history marks a big victory for the LGBT community and the Triangle Foundation in the year 2002 when more than a year of fighting and educating came to an end with a historic decision.

Rouge Park Timeline of Events:

February 2001: Detroit's 6th Police Precinct sends out a notice to the area, including the Triangle Foundation, that it will begin a sting in Rouge Park to sweep out prostitution. Within a month, Triangle received more than 700 calls of gay men getting caught up in the sting.

May 2001: Jeffrey Montgomery and attorney Rudy Serra held a meeting with two people from the Wayne County Forfeiture Office, the mayor, police chief and three deputy chiefs.

July 2001: Montgomery, Serra and one sting victim spoke at a Detroit City Council meeting for the first time about operations on Rouge Park. The council handed police officials 15 questions that needed to be answered by the next meeting.

August 2001: Second meeting with city council. Police officials weren't prepared with answers and Triangle received a call from the new police chief that all operations in Rouge Park were suspended.

May 2002: The Detroit City Council approved the authorization of a $170,000 settlement over the alleged sting of entrapping gay men at Rouge Park.

June 2002: District Court Judge Arthur J. Tarnow ruled in favor of Triangle and six individuals regarding the Rouge Park sting operation in 2001 and awarded the plaintiffs $170,000. No money went to Triangle. It was split between the six individuals.
Patterson Dog & Cat Hospital
Established in 1844
Glynès D. Graham, DVM
Doctor of Veterinary Medicine
3800 Grand River, Detroit, MI 48208-2866
tel: 313.832.7282  fax: 313.832.4990
www.pattersondogandcat.com

Unity of Royal Oak
Christmas 2018
Join Us
SUNDAYS, 10 AM
or for one of these events:
MOnDAY, 12/24
6 PM & 8 PM
NEW TIMES
Christmas Eve
Candle Light Services
MOnDAY, 12/31
6 PM
NYE Burning Bowl Service
SUNDAY, 1/6
10 AM
White Stone Ceremony
Unity of Royal Oak • 2500 Crooks Road • Royal Oak, MI 48073
248.288.3550 • www.unityofroyaloak.org #MoreThanAChurch

December 24th, 7 p.m.,
Candlelight
Christmas Eve Service

Join us for our annual candlelight Christmas Eve service as we are reflective of the greatest gift of all and how we can be a blessing to others in the world.

MCC, Detroit
Weekly Sunday Worship @ 11:30 am.
205 N. Main St.
Clawson, MI 48017
(248) 399-7741

AWBS
ALL WELL-BEING SERVICES
BRINGING WELLNESS TO LIFE
All Well-Being Services (AWBS) is a nationally accredited organization that has provided services to residents of Wayne County for sixty-five years.

AWBS offers a variety of services to allow members to function at their greatest potential by using trained professionals and best practices

AWBS SERVICES: Mental Health Services, Substance Use Treatment,
HIV Prevention, STD Testing, Primary Care, Basic Dental Care, Health
Workshops and Intellectual Development Disabilities Services
(Skill Building, Family Support and more).

FOR MORE INFORMATION OR APPOINTMENT CALL
(313)347-2070 (313)273-4111 or (313)924-7860
www.awbs.org
Openly Gay Jeremy Moss Sworn in as State Senator

BY JASON A. MICHAEL

Openly gay State Rep. Jeremy Moss was sworn in on Sunday to his new role as state senator. An enthusiastic crowd of more than 100 came out to the Plumbers Local 98 headquarters in Madison Heights to hear speaker after speaker laud the young leader with praise before the oath of office was administered by Michigan Supreme Court Justice Bridget Mary McCormack.

Southfield Mayor Kenison Siver acted as the afternoon’s emcee and was the first to address Moss’s crowd of supporters. “This is the evolution; the next step in Jeremy’s political journey,” Siver said. “It all started when he was 5 years old and his mom and dad asked Jeremy where he’d like to go on a trip. Normal 5-year-olds would say Disney World. No, Jeremy said Washington, D.C.”

Siver added that he felt Moss was uniquely qualified to hold public office. “He bleeds politics,” Siver said. “This is his passion: public service and being in the political arena.”

U.S. Sen. Gary Peters praised莫斯’s maturity. “Although he may be fairly young in age, 32 years old, we’re all from Detroit so we know in the car business it’s not the age it’s the mileage that really matters,” Peters said. “And, in Jeremy’s case, he has a lot of mileage. … The thing about Jeremy is he’s authentic about this. He’s sincere. I’ve watched him through his career over these last years and I just think he’s ideally suited to be in public service and the kind of man that he is more important than ever right now.”

Michigan Attorney General-elect Dana Nessel brought a little levity to today to speak on behalf of Jeremy Moss. “Jeremy cares so deeply about the people that he serves and is so full of the conviction that he can actually make a difference,” Nessel said. “He can help people and he has helped people for so many years.”

Just 25 when he was elected to the Southfield City Council, Moss became particularly close with then-mayor Brenda Lawrence, who had already been something of a mentor for him for several years. When she was nominated for lieutenant governor in 2010, Moss was her only staffer. Then, in 2015, Moss began the first of two terms in the state House.

“He’s sincere. I’ve watched him through his career over these last years and I just think he’s ideally suited to be in public service and the kind of man that he is more important than ever right now.”

Michigan Attorney General-elect Dana Nessel brought a little levity to proceedings. She mentioned that post-election she had been taking meetings with folks on the other side of the aisle.

“Over and over when I had these meetings to try to get to know Republicans they’ll say to me, ‘Hey, you don’t have to worry about me. I’m cool. I’m a friend of Jeremy’s,” Nessel said. “I never really know what they mean by that. Does that mean you’re cool with the gays, or cool or with the Jews or maybe, like, a little of both? I’m not exactly sure. But either way, Jeremy, thank you so much for being an ambassador on behalf of Democratic gay Jews everywhere.”

Turning serious for a moment, Nessel added to her speech that it was “a privilege and an honor to be here a point in time when you step back from the mentoring and you become a supporter. Publicly, I want to say to Jeremy today [that] I congratulate you and take the title of mentor away from us and stand here today as a supporter, as someone who honors and respects you and is so excited for you. “

Looking ahead, Lawrence made sure to emphasize that she feels Moss will have a long future in politics. “His future is just unlimited,” she said. “I want to be healthy and alive so I can be on his campaign for president of the United States.”

After taking the oath, Moss spoke for only a few minutes, but he was direct in his message. “We rank as the least transparent and least ethical state government in the country and in this lame duck period the majority party has proven why that’s the case.”

- State Sen. Jeremy Moss

“We rank as the least transparent and least ethical state government in the country and in this lame duck period the majority party has proven why that’s the case.”

Huntington Woods Drag Queen Story Time Comes Under Fire

BY JASON A. MICHAEL

For the Huntington Wood Library’s Drag Queen Story Time, a glittering drag queen comes to the library to read to young children once a month. The program, said to be the third of its kind in the nation, has been going on for just over a year now with great success. But despite the good reviews it’s been receiving, Allison Iversen, a Huntington Woods city commissioner, has stepped up to say she has a problem with the program and finds it offensive.

In an email sent to Huntington Woods Library Youth Services Coordinator Joyce Krom Nov. 17, Iversen wrote, “I know there is a desperate need for people to understand and accept people that are different. I believe using ‘drag queens’ as a means to aid in this process is a mistake. Children are innocent little beings and we, as a society, should be banding together to preserve that innocence for as long as possible.”

Seemingly not seeing the opportunity for teachable moments, Iversen went on to express that drag queens were merely to be laughed at. “A [drag queen story time] for adults would be hilarious and would make much more sense than DQST for preschool/elementary children,” Iversen wrote.

Iversen went on to call drag queen story time “provocative, controversial, ‘unabashedly queer’ demonstrations of diversity.”

Iversen even went so far as to request that the event not only be “reconsidered or changed to an adult event,” but asked that signs advertising drag queen story time not be posted in the children’s area of the library.

“We can opt to not attend the event,” Iversen said. “But we can’t ‘opt out’ of our children reading the flyers lining the bookshelves. I’d rather not be forced to explain what an ‘unabashedly queer drag queen’ is to my younger two children.”

Between The Lines has also learned that Iversen has been corresponding to members of an LGBT hate group using her official Huntington Woods email account. The group, called Mass Resistance, features an article on its website about its efforts to end drag queen story time in not only Michigan but also Alaska and New York. Mass Resistance has also announced plans to picket the next drag queen story hour in Huntington Woods, which is scheduled for Jan. 26.

In her first appearance at drag queen story time, the bejeweled

See Story Time, continued on p. 10

December 2017 gathering of Story Time. File Photo: Crystal Proxmire

Openly Gay Jeremy Moss Sworn in as State Senator

BY JASON A. MICHAEL

Openly gay State Rep. Jeremy Moss was sworn in on Sunday to his new role as state senator. An enthusiastic crowd of more than 100 came out to the Plumbers Local 98 headquarters in Madison Heights to hear speaker after speaker laud the young leader with praise before the oath of office was administered by Michigan Supreme Court Justice Bridget Mary McCormack.

Southfield Mayor Kenison Siver acted as the afternoon’s emcee and was the first to address Moss’s crowd of supporters. “This is the evolution; the next step in Jeremy’s political journey,” Siver said. “It all started when he was 5 years old and his mom and dad asked Jeremy where he’d like to go on a trip. Normal 5-year-olds would say Disney World. No, Jeremy said Washington, D.C.”

Siver added that he felt Moss was uniquely qualified to hold public office. “He bleeds politics,” Siver said. “This is his passion: public service and being in the political arena.”

U.S. Sen. Gary Peters praised Moss’s maturity. “Although he may be fairly young in age, 32 years old, we’re all from Detroit so we know in the car business it’s not the age it’s the mileage that really matters,” Peters said. “And, in Jeremy’s case, he has a lot of mileage. … The thing about Jeremy is he’s authentic about this. He’s sincere. I’ve watched him through his career over these last years and I just think he’s ideally suited to be in public service and the kind of man that he is more important than ever right now.”

Michigan Attorney General-elect Dana Nessel brought a little levity to the proceedings. She mentioned that post-election she had been taking meetings with folks on the other side of the aisle.

“Over and over when I had these meetings to try to get to know Republicans they’ll say to me, ‘Hey, you don’t have to worry about me. I’m cool. I’m a friend of Jeremy’s,” Nessel said. “I never really know what they mean by that. Does that mean you’re cool with the gays, or cool or with the Jews or maybe, like, a little of both? I’m not exactly sure. But either way, Jeremy, thank you so much for being an ambassador on behalf of Democratic gay Jews everywhere.”

Turning serious for a moment, Nessel added to her speech that it was “a privilege and an honor to be here a point in time when you step back from the mentoring and you become a supporter. Publicly, I want to say to Jeremy today [that] I congratulate you and take the title of mentor away from us and stand here today as a supporter, as someone who honors and respects you and is so excited for you.”

Looking ahead, Lawrence made sure to emphasize that she feels Moss will have a long future in politics. “His future is just unlimited,” she said. “I want to be healthy and alive so I can be on his campaign for president of the United States.”

After taking the oath, Moss spoke for only a few minutes, but he was direct in his message. “We rank as the least transparent and least ethical state government in the country and in this lame duck period the majority party has proven why that’s the case.”

- State Sen. Jeremy Moss

“We rank as the least transparent and least ethical state government in the country and in this lame duck period the majority party has proven why that’s the case.”

Huntington Woods Drag Queen Story Time Comes Under Fire

BY JASON A. MICHAEL

For the Huntington Wood Library’s Drag Queen Story Time, a glittering drag queen comes to the library to read to young children once a month. The program, said to be the third of its kind in the nation, has been going on for just over a year now with great success. But despite the good reviews it’s been receiving, Allison Iversen, a Huntington Woods city commissioner, has stepped up to say she has a problem with the program and finds it offensive.

In an email sent to Huntington Woods Library Youth Services Coordinator Joyce Krom Nov. 17, Iversen wrote, “I know there is a desperate need for people to understand and accept people that are different. I believe using ‘drag queens’ as a means to aid in this process is a mistake. Children are innocent little beings and we, as a society, should be banding together to preserve that innocence for as long as possible.”

Seemingly not seeing the opportunity for teachable moments, Iversen went on to express that drag queens were merely to be laughed at. “A [drag queen story time] for adults would be hilarious and would make much more sense than DQST for preschool/elementary children,” Iversen wrote.

Iversen went on to call drag queen story time “provocative, controversial, ‘unabashedly queer’ demonstrations of diversity.”

Iversen even went so far as to request that the event not only be “reconsidered or changed to an adult event,” but asked that signs advertising drag queen story time not be posted in the children’s area of the library.

“We can opt to not attend the event,” Iversen said. “But we can’t ‘opt out’ of our children reading the flyers lining the bookshelves. I’d rather not be forced to explain what an ‘unabashedly queer drag queen’ is to my younger two children.”

Between The Lines has also learned that Iversen has been corresponding to members of an LGBT hate group using her official Huntington Woods email account. The group, called Mass Resistance, features an article on its website about its efforts to end drag queen story time in not only Michigan but also Alaska and New York. Mass Resistance has also announced plans to picket the next drag queen story hour in Huntington Woods, which is scheduled for Jan. 26.

In her first appearance at drag queen story time, the bejeweled

See Story Time, continued on p. 10

December 2017 gathering of Story Time. File Photo: Crystal Proxmire
Senate HIV Bills Package Explained

BY EVE KUCHARSKI

A package of bills is moving through the Michigan Senate that could change the way Michigan health officials monitor and address the HIV epidemic. Introduced last May in the Michigan House of Representatives, the eight-bill package contains HIV-specific bills that are aimed at updating Michigan’s existing laws that contain outdated language regarding issues like the spread of HIV, the role of local health departments in the virus’ treatment and criminal punishment for those who do not inform their sexual partner of their HIV-positive status.

Criminalization and Spread of HIV

Two bills within the package, 6020 and 6021, have come under extra scrutiny by some HIV advocacy organization around Michigan since they were amended from their original form to pass through the House. They were proposed by Democratic State Rep. Jon Hoadley of Kalamazoo who intended to “modernize our outdated HIV criminalization statute” by reducing the sentence for non-disclosure of one’s HIV status to a sexual partner from a felony to a misdemeanor.

“But the legislative process is never a linear line and there were still concerns that folks had around disclosure, around folks who are intentionally trying to transmit HIV without discussions and a number of other issues,” Hoadley said. “So, working in a bipartisan way to get as much as we could in the 99th legislative session, Dr. Canfield and I worked together with other stakeholders to put together a version of a bill that was able to move forward.”

In a Dec. 11 Senate health policy committee, Republican State Rep. Edward Canfield said that the emphasis of the bill’s changes are on promoting treatment for HIV.

“I believe that what we’ve come up with in this package as it’s presented to you today really does bring the state of this health condition forward and helps people realize that getting treated is the best pathway,” he said. “... So it not only helps people live lives, but it protects our public health as well.”

The two bills now rest in the Senate, waiting to illustrate his point, Hoadley said that currently there were 19 cases prosecuted under the current law that were considered felonies even though no transmission of the virus occurred.

“So, if this had been in the law, 19 people would have spent fewer of their years in prison,” he said.

Hoadley added that he feels the new bill will make current HIV transmission cases fairer because they will provide an extra level of defense for those who have been able to take medication and suppress their viral load — or literally reducing the function of the virus to undetectable levels within their system. People who have been medically suppressed for six months are “by definition not acting with reckless disregard, so they are not eligible for prosecution under the law.”

“So, for the first time in Michigan, as we work to continue making the criminal justice system fairer — there’s still a lot more to do there — people have a shield from accusations that they didn’t disclose or whatever the case may be, they have an affirmative defense,” Hoadley said. “That part is really groundbreaking as well.”

6020 and 6021’s Critics

But as groundbreaking as that defense is, it is only viable for those who can afford care to suppress their HIV. Critics of the bill’s changes like former BTL contributor Todd Heywood relates to the prosecution of people living with HIV. He said that this unfairly discriminates against people of color without access to treatment centers.

“There is already a racial disparity as it relates to the prosecution of people living with HIV. ... Black men who have sex with women represented just 16 percent of the cases of people living with HIV (outside of Wayne County). They represented 36 percent of the prosecutions,” Heywood said. “We know in the state of Michigan and nationally that people of color have less access to medical care and create a tiered system. So, if someone knows their status, does not disclose, acts with reckless disregard, and transmits HIV, that is treated at current felony level still. But, if they don’t transmit then that would potentially be a misdemeanor if all the other criteria are met.”

To illustrate his point, Hoadley said that currently there were two cases prosecuted under the current law that were considered felonies even though no transmission of the virus occurred.

“... So it not only helps people live lives, but it protects our public health as well.”

See HIV Criminalization, continued on p. 17
Closing Party for Common Language Revives Years of Memories

BY JASON A. MICHAEL

It was Winnie the Pooh, with an assist from author A.A. Milne, who said, "How lucky I am to have something that makes saying goodbye so hard." Such was the emotion at the closing party for Common Language Bookstore on Saturday. A crowd of about 65 came out to walk through the store one last time and enjoy snacks and drinks in Ann Arbor’s intimate Braun Court near a warming fire pit. The party was hosted by Between The Lines publishers Susan Horowitz and Jan Stevenson.

"The closing of Common Language signifies the end of an era — a time when LGBT bookstores thrived as resource centers, meeting places and informal community centers," Stevenson said. "[The store’s owners] Keith [Orr] and Martin [Contreras] value this legacy and role and provided this space for years, long after it made any kind of economic sense. It’s so important to recognize their commitment and to thank them for their leadership and compassion for the LGBTQ community.”

Both Contreras and Orr said they were genuinely pleased with the party and with the community’s turnout.

“I love seeing so many people in the bookstore,” Contreras said. “I love hearing the stories and learning that people have fond memories. A lot of people were coming to the bookstore even before we purchased it. You never realize how you affect people. You just slug along and do what you enjoy doing or you feel it is the right thing to do.”

Orr said that he has made peace with the business’s closing.

“It’s bittersweet,” he said. “For us it’s a little bit out of kilter with other folks because by the time we made the announcement [to close] we had gone through a lot of this process already. There’s five stages of grief so we may be a couple steps ahead of the rest.”

Orr then added that the bookstore’s closing signifies a greater trend of change for LGBTQ bookstores across the nation.

“It’s not so much about a sadness about his place as it is about a sadness in general,” he said. “LGBTQ bookstores are closing and it’s harder for LGBTQ authors to find an audience. It’s harder for readers to find the stuff that they want. When they come in here, they’re getting something that’s already curated in a sense. No matter what algorithms Amazon creates, it’s not going to be the same.”

On hand to recognize Contreras and Orr’s contributions to the community were State Rep. Yusef Rabhi and a representative from Congresswoman Debbie Dingell’s office. They presented Contreras and Orr with a special tribute from the Washtenaw County contingency of the state legislature and a recognition in the congressional record respectively.

“It’s a thank you, basically, for being around for so long to be a place where people could come and feel safe,” Rabhi said. “They all signed the Washtenaw delegation plus some of our gay members of the legislature. It’s been an interesting journey for you, but you should know there are people all across the state who appreciate what you’ve done here in Ann Arbor.”

Returning customers to the store came from near and far to pay their respects and say goodbye. Will Daniels and Arne Spohr, for example, came all the way from Bowling Green, Ohio.

“I used to live in Ypsilanti,” Daniels said. “I went to school at Eastern Michigan University and I studied literature and I would always come to this bookstore to finding cutting edge stuff.”

Spohr, who is originally from Germany, said he’d been coming to the store since just after it was originally opened in 1991 in a location on Fourth Street.

“I have fond memories of being at the original store, buying copies of Out magazine and the Advocate and putting them in Tower Records bags [to conceal them].”

Looking back on the store’s history and the legacy that will live on, Contreras said he has accepted the fact that the store is closing but that he will miss the customers.

“You’d get people who’d come in for the first time that didn’t know a gay book store existed or that there was gay literature and not just gay erotica,” he said. “So we’ve had a lot of those conversations. Or people dealing with a change in their life, ‘I’m coming out to my parents’ or, ‘My dad is in transition’ or, ‘My mom is a lesbian. What can I do?’ We’d help them understand what’s going on. So I think it’s sad that the bookstore won’t be there for people, because that need will always be there and you can’t get that online through Amazon and you can’t get that from going into a straight bookstore because they don’t know the catalog as well.”

Common Language will shut its doors for good on Dec. 31, 2018.

"LGBTQ bookstores are closing and it’s harder for LGBTQ authors to find an audience. It’s harder for readers to find the stuff that they want. When they come in here, they’re getting something that’s already curated in a sense. No matter what algorithms Amazon creates, it’s not going to be the same.”

- Keith Orr
COME SEE OUR NEWLY EXPANDED STORE FEATURING THE WIDEST SELECTION OF THE BEST PET PRODUCTS AROUND!

- Two Custom Do-It-Yourself Dog Washrooms
- Over 60 Brands of Food
- Community Involvement
- Family Owned & Operated
- Friendly, Knowledgeable Staff

Voted “Best Pet Supply Store” in all of Metro Detroit!!

We pride ourselves in offering the great customer service you expect from a family-run business.

Mon– Sat 8:30-9pm & Sunday 10-6p.m.

WWW.PREMIERPETSUPPLY.COM

20% OFF ANY PURCHASE

OFFER EXCLUDES PANDORA ®, LOOSE DIAMONDS, AND SWAROVSKI.

6673 N. Canton Center Rd. - Canton, Michigan 48187
(734) 207-1906 - www.jacobmatthewjewelers.com
Services Take Place for Slain Trans Woman

Suspect Arraigned in the Death of Kelly Stough

BY JASON A. MICHAEL

Kelly Stough, known to some as Keanna Mattel, was laid to rest in fine style Saturday with a funeral at the James H. Cole Home for Funerals in Detroit with a memorial service later in the evening at the Affirmations LGBTQ community center in Ferndale. Stough was murdered Dec. 7 in the Palmer Park neighborhood and was remembered fondly by friends and family. That, her mother said, is the way it should be.

“She would be tickled pink to know that everything was so grand,” said attendee Jessica Williams. “She lived her life as such. I was just pleased with everything, I didn’t realize she touched so many lives and knew so many people. It was awesome.”

Jey’mce Poindexter Mizrahi, transgender victim advocate for Equality Michigan and member of the mother board of the Trans Sisters of Color Project – Detroit, attended both services.

“Her funeral was one of the most respectful and honorable funerals,” Mizrahi said. “There was not one thing disrespectful, one thing dishonorable. Her mother, Miss Jessica Williams, is a beautiful, strong, loving woman. And she made sure that her daughter was acknowledged properly and that she was sent away with the best regards.”

However, it doesn’t always happen that way for transgender women who are victims of hate crimes. According to a variety of sources, 36-year-old Stough’s murder was either the 24th, 25th or 26th of the trans woman to be murdered in the United States in 2018. However, in each of these statistics, overwhelmingly, the victims have been women of color.

On Monday, Dec. 10, the Wayne County Prosecutor’s Office charged Albert Weathers of Sterling Heights with shooting Stough. Weathers, 46, was identified in some reports as a preacher. He first told police he shot someone who was attempting to rob him, but authorities believe the story was fabricated and that it was Stough’s gender identity that made her a victim.

Weathers was arraigned on charges of open murder and possession of a firearm. A probable cause conference has been scheduled for Dec. 20 and a preliminary exam for Dec. 27. Judge Michael Wagner of the 36th District Court set Weather’s bond at $1 million.

The Prosecutor’s office assigned the case to Special Prosecutor Jaimie Powell Horowitz of the Fair Michigan Justice Project, which is a collaboration between the Prosecutor’s Office and Fair Michigan Foundation that assists Michigan law enforcement officers and prosecutors in solving serious crimes against LGBTQ people.

“This case reflects the excessive brutality that members of Detroit’s transgender community constantly face,” said Fair Michigan President Dana Nessel, who is also Michigani attorney general-elect. “We thank the Detroit Police Department for their efforts to investigate the facts of this tragic crime.”

Mizrahi said she is still processing the loss of her friend.

“Her murder was very personal to me,” she said. “She isn’t just a name or a statistic. This was my niece. This was someone who I watched grow up and come out into the LGBTQ community, go through her transition, perform, do the balls and still hold onto God and her family values.”

Williams said she is bothered by the disregard society seems to have for transgender women of color.

“They are people,” she said. “I don’t understand the fear and the stereotyping. Not just of trans women but gays, lesbians, bisexuals. I don’t understand the hatred. Why not talk to somebody? Have a dialogue. They eat and breathe, have a family that loves them. They contribute to their community. I don’t understand why there is so much hatred or the perception that they are trash … that people don’t care what happens to them. This is not true.”

Stough was special, her mother said, and that’s how she should be remembered.

“If you took the time to just talk with her you’d know that there’s nothing wrong with her,” Williams said. “I’m very proud of the attitude that she had, through all the teasing, bullying, she never got bitter. She was still happy. She had some down moments, but she was still happy and still confident. The fact that she decided to live her life as she chose made me very proud.”

A benefit was held at the Woodward Bar to help raise funds for Stough’s funeral. A GoFundMe page was also created by Stough’s cousin and her mother said all arrangements have been paid for and thanks the community for their support.

CALL NOW! 248-591-2888
Detroit Derby Hustles
An Inclusive League for Diverse Participants

BY DAVID RYALS

Starting in January 2005, a group of Metro Detroit women, ranging from mothers to students to careerists, craved an escape from their day-to-day lives and sought to discover their competitive and edgier sides. It was among the city's roller derby rinks that they were able to familiarize each other with those aspects of themselves. Soon after joining together, they founded the Detroit Derby Girls league and held their first event in February 2006. In November of that year, the league announced it had officially changed its name to Detroit Roller Derby. Eventually, it became a group that stands out as a premier team.

Melissa McDonald is a member of the league. She said the group's success is a "reflection of the city" within which it was born. "We hustle. We've got grit and tenacity (and) our members work hard on and off the track. Most of our members work full-time jobs, many are parents, and, on top of all of that, they're coming to practice two to three times a week, working a league job and contributing to the community," McDonald said. "I'm biased, but I would also say we have the best fans, and the best venue. It feels amazing to play at the Masonic temple, in the heart of the city, to a crowd who is just as invested in the teams, their rivalries, their struggles and successes."

Perhaps one of the reasons behind the team's success and the drive of its members is Detroit Roller Derby's overall attention to inclusivity. Adam Kenyon is a member of DRD whose team name is AK400z. He said that roller derby has always had "strong representation from queer skaters and staff from the beginning."

"Though I'd never want to speak for everyone, I can say it has largely been very socially liberal as a subculture and movement," Kenyon said. "There are plenty of people across the sport who are not only on the vanguard of social movements, there are even folks in politics who are, or were, very involved in roller derby. There has always been a strong push within Detroit Derby to be at the forefront of conversations about diversity and gender equality, even across the community at large."

And DRD doesn't seem to be unique in this push for versatility and progressive change. Throughout its history, those qualities seem to have been a hallmark of the sport itself. In fact, during its modern revival, roller derby has come to be one of the most inclusive sports there is today. Since its inception in the early 20th century, the sport has constantly changed its image — from a roller-skating competition to a stunt-oriented, stylized version — eventually, becoming an athletics-heavy sport that has shot up in popularity both locally and around the country.

One of the reasons is because there is no mold for a "classic" roller derby participant. Amanda Draft, whose team name is Meryl Slaughter Dodson, is also a member of Detroit Roller Derby. She talked about how that lack of distinct player definitions has created a huge pull for skaters to join leagues everywhere. Draft said that roller derby can attract anyone from lifelong athletes who are looking to stay fit after high school and college, to first-time sportspeople.

"Roller derby attracts a wide variety of age groups. In Detroit alone, we have adult skaters ranging in age from 18 to mid-40s. Derby is played by 'real' people with day jobs," Draft said. "Petite or robust, a skater can see their body type represented on the track doing amazing things. It is 'for the skater, by the skater' and is not owned by an outside entity — we have ownership over our sport."

Still, as inclusive as the sport is now, that didn't come easily for all groups involved. And, in fact, there have been some stumbling blocks along the road.

"The inclusion and acceptance for trans skaters has been a much tougher conversation governing body. She said it has "evolved over time" in terms of acceptance.

"The WFTDA implemented a gender policy in 2011 that required hormonal documentation for trans and intersex women," Draft said. "They revised that policy in 2015 to remove the hormonal requirement, stating that trans women, intersex women and gender-expansive individuals can play if they feel that women's roller derby is the place for them. As an organization, we have followed that change, but we acknowledge that we still have work to do in this area."

But even with what remains to be done, DRD is visibly working to include anyone interested in playing and retaining its members.

"Detroit is also the biggest league in Michigan. We have four home teams, three travel teams, a men's team, two juniors' home teams and two juniors' travel teams," McDonald said. "There's a place for you here no matter who you are or what you want to do."

"We hustle. We've got grit and tenacity (and) our members work hard on and off the track. Most of our members work full-time jobs, many are parents, and, on top of all of that, they're coming to practice two to three times a week, working a league job and contributing to the community."

League member Melissa McDonald.

Detroit Roller Derby’s next boot camp for new skaters will start the second week of January. Those who are interested in joining can email hr@detroitrollerderby.com to get more details, or by visiting detroitrollerderby.com, following the group on facebook.com/DetroitRollerDerby/ or by finding them on Instagram @detroitderby.
AMERICA’S ORIGINAL CRAFT VODKA

I’m TITO BEVERIDGE. My Handcrafted American Vodka beats the giant imports EVERY DAY!

Tito’s Handmade Vodka

Certified Gluten-Free

Tito’s is Certified GF

Handcrafted to be savored responsibly.

TitosVodka.com

Leafly.com
Christmas with Liberace

My grandmother Lottie Lee Alexander lived with my parents and me from the time I was five until she died in 1954 when I was 18, and had just finished Cass Technical High School where I was a commercial art major.

My grandmother did much to encourage my interest in the visual arts, church music and — I kid you not — her TV idol and friend each week: Wladziu Valentino. LIBERACE!

Granny was herself born in 1880 in Fort Payne, Alabama, a distant cousin removed from Robert E. Lee. In her mid-30s she was a Methodist Church organist and a dabbler in watercolors. She was an excellent cook, and her down-home corn bread and sweet potato pies highlighted many of our family chats in our small 444 Peterboro apartment kitchen. Just barely room for four and the small stove on which she performed her mealtime miracles.

In the late 1950s we owned a small 13” black and white RCA Victor TV. (I remember when I was 15 watching “The Howdy Doody Show,” “The Auntie Dee Show” and the weekly big-name Paul Whiteman Band program. I had my first crush on a teenage guy on Whiteman’s program.)

Liberace was a big star in the late ’50s, ’60s and ’70s and my grandmother was a devoted fan — in spite of the fact that my dad had questionable comments and dinnertime remarks about the smiling, winking, waving, fluttering, kiss-blowing, all-showbiz keyboard wizard.

“No wonder that British journalist called Maestro Libby a ‘fruitcake’!” said my dad, helping himself, no doubt, as a subliminal commentary item a similar fruit Christmas treat that Granny had just baked. (The journalist, by the way, was sued for his slandering and Liberace won a few thousand British pounds for the remark.)

For my grandmother, Liberace’s nationally viewed, weekly TV performance was the highlight of her week. My mother, dad and I knew Granny was getting ready for the weekly event by her behavior early in the day on Fridays.

“Here we go again,” my dad would signal mom and me. “Granny’s humming to herself, and moving her own music performing 10 fingers.”

As TV time drew closer, Granny would retreat to the bathroom to comb her hair, put on fresh makeup, and make sure her lipstick and dentures were secure. Shelled then carefully pick one of her many, newly ironed dresses to wear. And, of course, smile, smile, a lot. Her usually uneventful old age was about to be given a touch of piano spark and pizzazz!

Granny decided that the Christmas Liberace TV Show — unbeknownst to us all, it would be her life’s closure event — needed a special touch. To her tailored red-and-green outfit she added a Santa fan to wave and to keep beat to the Holiday music, and promptly one half hour before Liberace was to appear, she sat herself squarely, comfortably, belongingly, adoringly, in front of our family TV.

Then the Christmas magic began for Granny! And for us! The cameras lit, the keyboard music cascaded forth! Liberace smiled,
The holidays can be hard times for those of us who are transgender. We may have to spend time with family who are less than supportive, hiding ourselves from them to remain safe and well. We may have been cast out by family and friends, too, and feel lost, cold and alone during this time that is sold to us as “the most wonderful time of the year.”

Transmissions
Continued from p. 14

Today, this may be easier. There are a lot more resources available, and they are easier to find. When I was wishing as a child, I had only the slightest inklings that this was even possible, fed by what little was said in the media at the time.

Even when I did start transition, there was no World Wide Web to find the steps forward. I assure you that I had to walk uphill both ways to transition, and today you have the great and good opportunity to not go through all that I did.

That said, while the path is easier, it is not without difficulty. While more people support transgender people today, we are not supported by all. We still have to often jump through hoops to get care, and — especially right now — all of our rights remain in question.

The holidays can be hard times for those of us who are transgender. We may have to spend time with family who are less than supportive, hiding ourselves from them to remain safe and well. We may have been cast out by family and friends, too, and feel lost, cold and alone during this time that is sold to us as “the most wonderful time of the year.”

It can be hard to hold onto hope in the middle of all this, and you may feel that there is little recourse. No sleigh is on its way, ready to deliver a box containing your deepest desires.

There is so much mythology around the season, and so many Hallmark-styled expectations of a warm, happy holiday with family and friends. Even under the best of circumstances, most family gatherings this time of year won’t measure up to the images fed to us in the sentimental tales that make their way to big and small screens this time of year.

When you add in being transgender, these experiences become just a bit further out of reach.

So, this is my gift to you this holiday season. I wish to offer you a moment of hope.

As you read this, should you too be under this grand umbrella of transgender identities, no matter how you opt to define it, I want to assure you that you too dreams are achievable.

You hold the power and the magic to form your needs into your reality, should you just wish it.

Gwen Smith wishes you the happiest of holidays, no matter what path you follow. You’ll find her at gwensmith.com.

Parting Glances
Continued from p. 14

dazzled, performed and — the moment our beloved Granny had been waiting for — ‘waved’ to Granny.

And Granny, once more bonded with her musical paramount, waved back, smiled and heartily rhythm her Santa fan at Libby! It was a true moment of bonding for Granny at 85.

Later, my father tried to enlighten Granny.

“Mom, come on now! No way Liberace can see into our tiny apartment. He can’t see you, me, mom or Buzz. But, dear heart, if this Christmas make believe makes you happy that’s really all that matters. Merry Christmas mom. Merry Christmas Liberace!”

Many years into the mid-Detroit ‘60s I was partying with friends at the history, long-vanished Diplomat Drag Bar on Second Boulevard, a few blocks north of the famous Fisher Theater. Among the visiting guests that holiday night were show business entertainers, including an unexpected drop-in: Liberace! (Ethel Merman also once performed at the Dip on a drop-in visit.)

I observed him intently, and — as did everyone else I’m sure that special night — Liberace wasn’t flamboyant, wasn’t a tad queeny, not one iota, Certainly no Christmas time ‘fruit cake’ in his actions. In fact, I was downright disappointed. He was just Wladziu Valentin.

Nonetheless, I smiled and waved to Liberace mentally. Granny would have wanted me to do so. Mary Christmas.

Charles Alexander is prolific both as a BTL columnist (700-plus columns) and as a well-known LGBT community artist (1000 Facebook images). He is a Spirit of Detroit Award recipient and an Affirmations LGBT CENTER Jan Stevenson awardee. Connect with him at Charles@pridesource.com.

Creep Of The Week

Mass Resistance

Just about every LGBTQ person has a story about something that confirmed for them that they were LGBTQ. For me it was Lynda Carter as Wonder Woman. That is, you might say, my root.

For the next generation of LGBTQ folks their root will be Drag Queen Story Hour at their local library.

A whole host of kids who would have otherwise been 100 percent heterosexual and have a rigidly traditional masculine or feminine gender identity that matches 100 percent with their genitals will now grow up to be some variety of gender nonconforming homo. Ugh, and they’ll probably love books and reading, too.

Thankfully a group that calls itself Mass Resistance is rising from the depths to defeat the drag queen story hour menace and make sure children are trained up to be bigots just like them.

Yes, I used the “B” word, which I know Mass Resistance would take offense to. As they write on their website, “It’s becoming common for the media or left-wing public officials attempt to marginalize any group of people who oppose the liberal agenda and support religious values by publicly calling them a ’hate group.’” MR calls this “childish and offensive.”

Well, I call Mass Resistance a hate group. And I’d love to attend a Drag Queen Story Hour. Call me childish, I guess.

Mass Resistance’s latest focus is on Michigan, my home state, where they are forming a chapter. And MR has a pretty interesting view of how LGBTQ friendly Michigan is.

“The LGBT Movement has been plowing ahead at the local level, and even the state-level in Michigan,” the MR website reads. “Republican party members have developed a pro-gay attitude and even reach out to ‘gay’ groups, we’ve been told. Sadly, this even includes former Michigan GOP Chair and current Secretary of Education Betsy DeVos.”

So Michigan Republicans are on some kind of pro-equality mission I think someone forgot to tell them. I’ve lived in Michigan my whole life and I can tell you that the GOP isn’t pro-LGBTQ, and Betsy DeVos sure isn’t leading any pride parades.

“Thankfully,” the MR website continues, “Michigan pro-family activists have held back most of these changes, but as is happening across the country, the homosexual-transgender ideology is still making headway on the Wolverine State.”

Case in point: Mass Resistance’s first target: shutting down Drag Queen Storytime at the Huntington Woods Library.

“Drag Queen Storytime captures the imagination and play of the gender fluidity of childhood and gives kids glamorous, positive, and unabashedly queer role models,” the library’s website reads. “In spaces like this, kids are able to see people who defy rigid gender restrictions and imagine a world where people can present as they wish, where dress up is real.”

And the theme of storytime is “I Like Me Just the Way I Am!”

Now, to me, this sounds amazing. But to the hateful folks at Mass Resistance, it sounds downright apocalyptic.

“Drag Queen Story Hour is nothing more than a subtle push of the harmful and immoral LGBT ideas.” MR warns in a poorly written message. “This agenda is anti-family, anti-life, anti-biology, and it is coming for your children!”

That doesn’t appear to bother the parents who bring their kids to the DQH. As one parent told the local news about his 2- and 3-year-olds, “We just wanted them to have these early memories of experiencing diversity as a social norm.”

Mass Resistance believes that this parent is committing child abuse. They also have no idea what the difference is between being transgender and drag queen performance. They are very confused.

In an email to the library MR Organization Director Arthur Schaper wrote, “The very idea of allowing adult, perverse entertainment into a public library and offering it to preschoolers — it is beyond outrageous.”

I’d have to agree, if that’s what was happening. Drag shows can definitely get pretty raunchy. But this isn’t a drag show. This is a person in a costume reading a kids’ book to kids.

In a local news story about the library event there is a photo of a child with fairly long hair who is wearing pajamas with footballs on them. No doubt someone is holding this picture up at Mass Resistance chapter meeting screaming, “Is this a boy or a girl? How can we know for sure? CURSE YOU DRAG QUEENS!”

And hey, I didn’t even know that there was a Drag Queen storytime at a library near me, so I thank MR for letting me know. My son’s a little too old for storytime, but you can bet my Mass that we’re going to be at the next one.

Because you know what’s a real drag? Hated and illiteracy. Drag queens reading to kids combats both.
Rep. Nancy Pelosi stopped by Floriana on 17th Street on Friday. (Washington Blade photo by Michael Key)

“By the way that we will be successful – not only that we can pass it but we want it to become law,” she said referring to its prospects of passing in the Republican-controlled Senate. “So we think our best friend in all of this will be public opinion,” she said. “The public sees what this is and says let’s just get on with it – let’s just get on with it.”

Pelosi said that along with the Equality Act, House Democrats would be pushing hard for “responsible background checks to end gun violence” and for legislation to protect “dreamers,” the mostly young undocumented immigrants who were brought to the United States as children and who have lived in the U.S. most of their lives.

Sevilla said Pelosi’s visit was initiated by some of her staff members who live in the neighborhood.

“The tree started getting some traction and people started getting their picture taken in front of it and hash-tagging it,” he said. “And a couple of people from her office I think live up the street and they ended up stopping by. And they said we have to bring her by. She would love this,” he said.

“And one thing led to another and they gave me a call … and here they are,” said Sevilla. House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (D-Calif.) with Dito Sevilla.

This article originally appeared in the Washington Blade and is made available in partnership with the National LGBT Media Association.

Angela Ponce is First Transgender Contestant in Miss Universe

BY MARIAH COOPER

Angela Ponce made history as the first transgender contestant to compete in Miss Universe during the 2019 competition. Ponce, 27, represented Spain in the Miss Universe competition, which took place in Bangkok, Thailand, and aired live on Sunday. The competition featured women representing 94 nations around the world.

She didn’t win the crown, that honor went to Miss Philippines (Catriona Gray), or even make the top 20 but Ponce was grateful just for the representation.

“I don’t need to win Miss Universe,” Ponce said after her elimination, “I only need to be here.”

Later in the show, Miss Universe aired a pre-recorded segment which gave Ponce a platform to speak on the importance of her being in the competition.

“I’m here to represent diversity of humans in the world,” Ponce says, “My hope is for tomorrow to be able to live in a world of equality for everyone, simply for us all to understand that we are human and that we must make all our lives easier together. That reality for many people is going to change.”

She also posted how monumental her inclusion in the pageant was on Instagram.

“What an honor and pride to be part of the history of @missuniverse,” Ponce penned in Spanish. “This is for you, for those who have no visibility, no voice, because we all deserve a world of respect, inclusion and freedom. And today I am here, proudly representing my nation, all women and human rights.”

Transgender women were banned from competing in Miss Universe until Jenna Talackova (Canada) challenged the ban and it was lifted in 2012. Ponce is the first transgender contestant to advance to the final competition.

Bermuda Government Appeals Ruling Against Marriage Repeal Law

BY MICHAEL K. LAVERS

The government of Bermuda has asked a British territories appellate court to overturn a ruling against a law that rescinded marriage rights for same-sex couples.

The appeal was filed in the Privy Council in London on Dec. 13, less than a month after Bermuda’s top court ruled the Domestic Partnership Act is unconstitutional.

Governor John Rankin’s decision to sign the law in February sparked outrage among local LGBTI advocates and prompted calls to boycott Bermuda’s tourism industry.

The Domestic Partnership Act took effect on June 1, thus becoming the first jurisdiction in the world outside the U.S. to rescind marriage rights for same-sex couples.

Bermuda Supreme Court Chief Justice Ian R. C. Kawaley five days later ruled the law is unconstitutional. Rankin’s overment appealed the decision to the Bermuda Court of Appeal.

“The government’s efforts to repeal same-sex marriage have come at quite a cost, not only monetarily, but also in terms of the impact on Bermuda’s LGBT community, and our island’s reputation overseas,” said Roderick Ferguson, one of the plaintiffs in a lawsuit that sought marriage rights for same-sex couples in Bermuda, in a press release that OUTBermuda, a local LGBTI advocacy group, released last week.

“The courts have not found merit in the government’s legal defense thus far, and are highly unlikely to do so upon appeal. At this point, an appeal to the Privy Council would merely serve to suit a political purpose. I implore the government to stop playing politics with the right to same-sex marriage. Let the law uphold the dignity of all Bermudians.”

This article originally appeared in the Washington Blade and is made available in partnership with the National LGBT Media Association.
HIV Criminalization
Continued from p. 7

have higher viral loads already. The way the current legislation is written will exacerbate this prosecution and create a deeper racial disparity that is unfair to people of color without addressing any of the other underlying issues.

When asked about these racial disparities, Hoadley said he understands there is still much work to be done, but said he feels that this is a better alternative to the existing law on the books, citing it as “terrible about what it criminalizes.”

“I think we have to always be looking at race-based discrepancies in both our health system and our criminal justice system. One of the reasons I think the bill addresses a part of that is by eliminating many of the unscientific ways that someone could have gotten charged with these crimes previously, regardless of someone’s intent or not; everybody’s a little bit safer,” Hoadley said. “When we talk about discrepancies in the criminal justice system, this bill will, across the board, limit the number of folks who could even enter into eligibility of the law and also creates tiers. And part of that balancing act is that the current law captures so many more folks who could not even to some degree transmit HIV.”

In his testimony, Heywood also provided a numerical representation of the additional cost of maintaining a prisoner who has HIV using his own medication.

“Four bottles of one month’s worth of HIV drugs for me and I will tell you that that adds up to be between $62,000 and $67,000 a year to keep me alive,” Heywood said. “And we as taxpayers will then have to bear that burden when we put somebody in prison. That information is not in your fiscal analysis and I think that that needs to be taken into account. It is fiscally irresponsible when we have other options and ways to address this.”

Heywood’s reference to “other ways” refers to Michigan’s section of the public health code that addresses people infected with diseases that are “health threat[s] to others.” That statute does not criminalize those with contagious diseases, but rather puts them into immediate emergency treatment. His testimony suggested an amendment that would link the new bills to existing legislation.

“We could tie ‘health threat to others’ to this legislation which would then require that a person go through the probable process to address their HIV and the psychosocial issues that are involved in likely transmission behavior before they go through a criminal process,” Heywood said. Hoadley said that he recognized the existing faults of the bill, but sees the currently rewritten legislation as a jumping off point to a more inclusive law.

“I think we have to continue to tackle places where we see discrepancies in health care,” he said. “For me, this shows why this project is a step in the right direction but not a finishing line.”

Privacy Concerns

Also included in the package of bills was a move to require women in their third trimester of pregnancy to get tested for HIV, Hepatitis B and syphilis. As written, the legislation would not allow a woman to opt out of such testing which essentially creates a system of mandatory testing. Currently, lawmakers are floating amendments that would allow a woman to opt out of such testing verbally. A second bill on testing would have mandated HIV testing consent be included in other general medical consents, and that a person not wishing to take an HIV test could opt out of this process. Lawmakers are working on an amendment to allow people to verbally opt out of HIV testing.

Additional legislation would eliminate the 90-day record retention rule related to HIV partner services. The new legislation would allow the state to maintain those records indefinitely. Something they already do, in violation of Michigan law.

“Currently under Michigan law, the partner notification information that is solicited after somebody is diagnosed with HIV is only supposed to be kept for 90 days. What the state has not said publicly is that since 2003 they have been collecting that data,” Heywood said. “They currently have a database containing over 500,000 names and information of people at risk for HIV, living with HIV or tested for HIV. In addition to that, they shifted about three years ago to a federal database owned by the CDC not in the state of Michigan that all of that information is being stored on, in violation of Michigan law.”

Lawmakers are working on an amendment which will allow the data to be maintained no longer than 365 calendar days.

An amendment related to partner services is also being considered which will prohibit local and state health officials from contacting a person identified as a sexual or needle-sharing partner of a person living with HIV, or the persons living with HIV when they have declined partner services.

“The problem with this is that there is nothing to stop me when I have a partner notification conversation with a health department official from saying — and I apologize Sen. Shirkey for identifying you — Sen. Shirkey and I shot needles of methamphetamine up and now Sen. Shirkey’s name is in a federal database as a methamphetamine user,” Heywood said. “Whether it is true or not, the senator would have no knowledge of that and no option to remove that from the database. That is deeply problematic.”

The lame-duck session is scheduled to end this week, Thursday. More updates about this legislation will come out as it moves through the Senate.
BY CHRIS AZZOPARDI

Name a 24-year-old Oscar nominee more qualified to take the throne as a crown-donning, queer-friendly queen than Saoirse Ronan. The “Mary Queen of Scots” star’s own life is rich in queer-adjacent roles and gay besties, and as powerful progressive Mary Stuart, the Irish actress sees her real-life allyship translate to a supreme role based on the Scottish royal who precedes her by, oh, 500 years.

Then and now, leave it to rascally men to get in the way of reigning women, as Stuart requests to succeed her cousin Queen Elizabeth I; egos clash in the name of peace, and the queens wind up in a tempestuous and fatal feud. This was the 16th century, but here we are hundreds of years later: women are asserting their power and uniting to disband centuries of oppression, the kind Elizabeth and Stuart, together, never could.

Given her masterful and awards-honored work in other sublime periods dramas like 2015’s “Brooklyn” and 2008’s “Atonement” (resulting in her first Oscar nod, at just 13), Ronan’s precocious acting career could very well go down in history too. In Greta Gerwig’s 2017 dramedy “Lady Bird,” as a true-to-life awkward teen, the actress shared a tender moment with a gay boy she’d fallen for named Danny (Lucas Hedges, “Boy Erased”) that ranks as one of cinema’s great coming-out scenes.

So many of my friends are gay. And especially in the arts, I’m surrounded by people of all different sexual orientations all the time. The best thing about the experience of being in this world is that everyone just becomes this one thing and, for me anyway, there’s never been any sort of separation at all or segregation. So yeah, that’s why. I also just feel like as much as it’s important to tell any sort of love story if it’s between a man and a woman, it’s equally important to shine a light on gay relationships too.

In 2015, when you could vote for the first time in Ireland, you voted in favor of the same-sex marriage referendum. You also spoke at a campaign event in Dublin organized by the Yes Equality group. Why are LGBTQ issues important to you?
Which “Mary Queen of Scots” does. The film’s emotional core is really the result of Mary’s relationship with her private secretary and confidante David Rizzio, who’s portrayed as just one of the girls. Reflecting on the LGBTQ people in your life, how did that scene personally resonate with you?

I guess it goes back to just what I was saying: That there’s no difference for me at all, and we’re all together working and being friends and supporting each other. And actually, the thing is, at that time there was a lot of sexual fluidity because it was pre-Victorian era, where everyone got a bit poker-up-their-arse, and so everyone was quite open. I don’t know whether you could say accepting, necessarily, but certainly sort of nonjudgmental. Also, marriage was a separate thing to love and sex back then. So Mary really was that open; she came from France, she came from a very culturally rich Renaissance country and, yeah, I feel like the arts still embody that.

You know, I’ve even noticed with one of my best friends, because he’s a little bit younger than me, but all of his friends were coming out from such an early age in a way that even mine weren’t, and I’m only a few years older than him. He’s grown up with just being around everything and everyone, and it made him a much happier person.

Without giving too much away, you walk in on two men in bed together. Were you as happy as I was to have a period film acknowledge that men slept with other men during that time?

Well, yeah – especially when they’re both so beautiful! You know what? The thing was, for me: I was quite excited that – like, more often than not it’s the women who are naked in the bed, and it’s the woman’s arse that you see. Usually the man is completely covered up. And so what I loved about it being two men together in bed is that you got to see them in all their glory and beauty. It was two male bodies being exposed in a lovely way, which I really, really liked. There was something about that that as a female actor I found quite exciting.

Piggybacking off a major plot point that I won’t spoil for readers: Have you ever been in love with a gay man?

(Laughs) Have I ever been in love with a gay man? I think I’m in love with every gay man I know, probably! I think most women have been in that situation. But yeah, so many of my friends are gay and I love them to death. And what I’ve experienced with, specifically, the gay men that I’m close to is that there’s just a safety as a woman, a real safety that you feel. And a security. It’s a safe space.

And you’re that same place for them?

Yeah, I hope so. Luckily, the friends that I have who are gay are very confident anyway and they sort of don’t give a shit, but you want all your friends to feel supported, and I think we all do support each other. I think it’s one of those things: Their sexual orientation or mine doesn’t really come into it because we’re just people and friends, and so it’s got a real purity to it.

You’ve said that you don’t take gender into consideration when choosing roles, but yet you’ve not played a man.

No, I haven’t. None have been offered to me. But I would! I would. I’ve always liked the idea of playing someone from the opposite sex just because of what you get to do with it. I love the idea of being able to blur lines in such a kind of extreme way, but then also just from a pure actor point of view being able to work out somebody’s physicality and really embodying someone who would just move in a completely different way to you, and their voice register would be different and how they communicate and interact would be different and their gestures would be different. So yeah, I would love to do it. Even just for that alone.

See Saoirse Ronan, continued on p. 24
Royal Starr Returns To Host Filmmaker Community Mixer

BY BTL STAFF

ROYAL OAK — LGBTQ and ally filmmakers can look forward to the upcoming Royal Starr Arts Institute’s Community Mixer, scheduled to be held on Jan. 8 at 7 p.m. The Royal Starr Arts institute itself is a non-profit arts organization that encourages filmmakers from across the Metro area to meet up, chat about upcoming projects and possibly even collaborate. President of the group Luke Castle said he’s excited about the kick-off event for 2019.

“We really want to strengthen the filmmaking community here in Michigan, and we can do that by connecting filmmakers,” Castle said. “I’m looking forward to the continue growth of the Royal Starr Arts Institute. The Monthly Filmmaker Mixers were a great success last year. This year, we are adding RSAI Memberships as a way to support our ongoing mission to support our local artists while bringing them discounts and benefits with area businesses.”

There is no charge for admission, and attendees are encouraged to bring their business cards and headshots. Additionally, local directors will be accepting headshots for upcoming films.

These mixers are intentionally leading up to the annual Royal Starr Film Festival, an international movie gala celebrated in downtown Royal Oak, in September of 2019. The festival attracts filmmakers from all over Michigan, the United States and the world. Royal Starr is now accepting entries for the 2019 festival. Interested filmmakers can find more on submitting their films at RoyalStarr.org.

The event will be held at Hamlin Corner at 386 N. Main St. in Royal Oak. Tickets to the January Filmmaker Mixer are limited, they can be reserved for free at mixers.RoyalStarr.org.

Detroit Zoo Kicks Off Wild Winter Weekends in Jan. 2019

Just because there aren’t as many holiday celebrations to look forward to post Jan. 1 doesn’t mean that the Metro Detroit area doesn’t have winter-embracing events. In fact, starting Jan. 19, Royal Oak’s Detroit Zoo is hosting its annual Wild Winter Weekends tradition through Feb. 2.

“The Detroit Zoo is open 362 days a year, and winter is a magnificent time to see animals both indoors and out,” said Ron Kagan, Detroit Zoological Society executive director and CEO in a 2016 Wild Winter press release. “A visit at this time of year for a healthy dose of ‘Vitamin Z’ is the ultimate cool experience.”

Guests are encouraged to enjoy their favorite exhibits both indoor and out “along with special activities, zookeeper talks, crafts and more.”

To find out more about Wild Winter at the Detroit Zoo visit detroitzoo.org or call 248-541-5717.
ROYAL OAK BTL ADVERTISERS

LGBT NON-PROFITS
Common Ground.................... *
Higher Ground..................... *
MCCD .................................. *
Lambda Car Club................... *
Sing Out Detroit Chorus............. B
AIDS Walk Detroit.................. *

BTL ADVERTISERS
Bidwell Tovarez Pllc................. 1
C & N Party Rentals.................. *

Christine Cantrell, Ph.D............ 2
Joe Kort, Ph.D. ........................
Changez Salon .................... 5
Changz Salon ....................... *
Cloverleaf Fine Wine............ 3
Cloverleaf Fine Wine ............. 3
D’Amatos ............................. 4
D’Amatos ............................. 4
D.J. Murray Plumbing .......... 5
D.J. Murray Plumbing .......... 5
Five 15 ................................ 5
Five 15 ................................ 5
Fuller Life ............................. 6
Fuller Life ............................. 6
Harbour Tax & Accounting ....19
Holiday Market .....................
Inn Season’s Cafe ................. 8
Rosemary A. Jozwiak .............. 9

Miner’s Den .......................... 10
MCCD ................................ 4
Lambda Car Club ..................
Sing Out Detroit Chorus .........
AIDS Walk Detroit ............... *

Joe Kort, Ph.D. & Associates, PC .... 10
Miner’s Den ........................ 10
Namaste Yoga ...................... 14
Namaste Yoga ......................
New Beginnings Counseling ... 15
New Beginnings Counseling ... 15
Center .............................. 15
Center .............................. 15
Noir Leather ...................... 16
Noir Leather ......................
North Main Animal Hospital ... 16
North Main Animal Hospital ...
Thane Ostroth Dds............... 7
Thane Ostroth Dds............... 7
Thane Ostroth Dds............... 7
Dr. Bernadine Petzold ......... 9
Dr. Bernadine Petzold ......... 9
The Print Stop .....................
The Print Stop .....................
Royal Oak Farmer’s Market .... 20
Royal Oak Music Theatre ...... 21
Shelton & Dean Law Office .... 22
Stagecrafters ..................... 23
Sullivan & Son Funeral Dir. ... 24
Matt Sweet, MSW, PC.......... 10
Matt Sweet, MSW, PC.......... 10
Transcending Horizons ......... 7
Ron T. Williamson DDS ...... 1

Transcending Horizons ......... 7
Ron T. Williamson DDS ...... 1

Royal Oak Farmer’s Market .... 20
Royal Oak Music Theatre ...... 21
Shelton & Dean Law Office .... 22
Stagecrafters ..................... 23
Sullivan & Son Funeral Dir. ... 24
Matt Sweet, MSW, PC.......... 10
Matt Sweet, MSW, PC.......... 10
Transcending Horizons ......... 7
Ron T. Williamson DDS ...... 1

The Print Stop .....................
The Print Stop .....................
Royal Oak Farmer’s Market .... 20
Royal Oak Music Theatre ...... 21
Shelton & Dean Law Office .... 22
Stagecrafters ..................... 23
Sullivan & Son Funeral Dir. ... 24
Matt Sweet, MSW, PC.......... 10
Matt Sweet, MSW, PC.......... 10
Transcending Horizons ......... 7
Ron T. Williamson DDS ...... 1

C & N PARTY RENTALS
5140 Meijer Drive,
Royal Oak, MI 48073

Marquees, Canopies and Tents • Tables • Chairs • Linens
Dinnerware • Glassware • Flatware • Silver Service
Food Service & Cooking Equipment • Convention & Meeting Equipment

We have Beautiful Linens for all events and budgets!

248-435-3580 • 800-351-0031 • www.cnparty.com

www.PrideSource.com

December 20, 2018 | BTL 21
Karaoke and Ugly Christmas Sweater Party

Held at Royal Oak’s Mr. B’s Gastropub on Main Street on Dec. 19 is an event brimming with holiday cheer, karaoke and ugly Christmas sweaters. This annual party encourages guests to bring their wild side when expressing holiday cheer and serves as a way for Mr. B’s to say thank you to its regular karaoke crowd.

“In addition to our fabulous karaoke and $3 drink specials, we’ll be giving away hundreds of dollars in cash and presents all night,” write event organizers.

Though the event starts promptly at 9:30 p.m., attendees are advised to come early to secure a table for optimal holiday fun.

Find out more on the gastropub’s Facebook page or by calling 248-399-0017.

‘Phantom’ Cast to Perform Jan. 28 Benefit Concert of ‘Next to Normal’ for Affirmations, Broadway Cares

FERNDALE – Cast members of the national touring production of “The Phantom of the Opera” — coming to Detroit Jan. 24 to Feb. 3 at the Detroit Opera House — will perform a special concert to benefit Affirmations and Broadway Cares/Equity Fights AIDS. The event takes place at 7 p.m. on Monday, Jan. 28 at The Loving Touch in Ferndale.

“Next to Normal” is a 2008 American rock musical that tells the story of a mother who struggles with mental health problems. Along with the performance the evening will feature live and silent auctions, raffle and cash bar.

Admission is a $20 suggested donation and tickets are available at Affirmations, located at 290 West Nine Mile Road in Ferndale, at the Woodward Avenue Brewers box office, located at 22646 Woodward Ave.

The cast performing “Next to Normal” is involved in Cameron Mackintosh’s new production of Andrew Lloyd Webber’s “The Phantom of the Opera” makes its triumphant return to Detroit by Maria Björnson, lighting design by Tony Award-winner Paule Constable, new choreography by Scott Ambler and new staging by director Laurence Connor.

The production, overseen by Matthew Bourne and Cameron Mackintosh, boasts many exciting special effects including the show’s legendary chandelier. The beloved story and thrilling score – with songs like “Music of the Night,” “All I Ask Of You,” and “Masquerade” – will be performed by a cast and orchestra of 52, making this Phantom one of the largest productions now on tour.

The Loving Touch is located at 22634 Woodward Ave. in Ferndale. Doors open at 6 p.m. for the 18-plus event. Tickets available at the door. Tickets for “The Phantom of the Opera” are available by calling the Fisher Theatre at 313-872-1000 or online at broadwayindetroit.com.
Come to the Royal Oak Farmers Market and see what's new!

- Seasonal Organic Vegetables
- Seasonal Fruits and Vegetables
- Many Local Specialty Food Vendors
- Hormone FREE Meats & Free Range Eggs & Chicken
- Fresh Baked Bread
- Full Service Cafe Gourmet Coffee Stand
- Hours: Friday & Saturday 7am - 1pm

Come to Royal Oak Antiques & Collectibles!

Located at Royal Oak Farmers Market
Every Sunday 8am-5pm
Trinkets to treasures! Something for everyone!

Over 60 Dealers
- Indoors & Outdoors
- Vintage Resale
- Shabby Chic

Royal Oak FARMERS MARKET

316 East Eleven Mile Rd. 248-246-3276
www.ci.royal-ok.mi.us, click on Farmers Market
Open Saturdays All Year Round! Like us on Facebook!

BIDWELL TOVAREZ PLLC
PROVIDING BANKRUPTCY SOLUTIONS AND ALTERNATIVES

Providing personal and compassionate assistance with financial problems including Chapter 7 and 13 bankruptcies, foreclosure, garnishments and elimination of second mortgages.

What clients say about Bidwell Tovarez:
“Most trustworthy and experienced”
“Outstanding representation”
“Services with a personal touch”

Bidwell Tovarez PLLC
333 W 7th St., Ste. 140 432 N. Saginaw, Suite 800
Royal Oak, MI 48067  Flint, MI 48502
248-270-3333 810-222-6422

www.bidwelltovarez.com
david@bidwelltovarez.com

Call 248-270-3333

We are a debt relief agency. We help people file for bankruptcy relief under the Bankruptcy code.

ENJOY OUR WORLD-CLASS CATERING AT YOUR NEXT WEDDING OR SPECIAL EVENT

- A WORLD-CLASS GROCERY - RIGHT IN YOUR NEIGHBORHOOD
- WIDE ARRAY OF GOURMET PREPARED FOODS
- WONDERFUL PRODUCE, MEAT AND ETHNIC FOOD SELECTIONS
- WINES FROM ACROSS THE GLOBE
- JOIN US FOR MIREPOIX GOURMET COOKING CLASSES
- ONLINE SHOPPING COMING IN JULY!
You’re starring in Greta Gerwig’s upcoming remake of “Little Women” as Jo March. Jo was a tomboy, and some have speculated that she might be queer. Are you portraying Jo with that in mind?

I can’t say much about what we’re doing at the moment because we’re still shooting, but I do know there was a lot of speculation that ("Little Women" author) Louisa Alcott, who Jo is obviously based on, was probably at least bisexual. Whether you want to put a label on it or not, (she) fell in love with whoever, regardless of their gender. She was very forward thinking in that way, and she was liberal in that way. And Louisa came from a very Bohemian, pretty radical background – her family was amazing and really forward-thinking, so Louisa certainly explores that part of herself.

In both “Lady Bird” and “Mary Queen of Scots,” the approach to the gay reveal has been refreshingly played without blame. Queerness isn’t framed as betrayal. Are these situations handled as delicately as they seem to be?

Yeah, I think so. I think in both cases the directors are close to gay men themselves and have been in similar situations with mates of theirs; so they know how delicate a thing that is and how important it is to honor that and be as sensitive with that as possible because it’s such a huge thing for a person. It’s certainly been a lovely thing to be a part of, honoring that and shining a light on that experience for someone.

As editor of Q Syndicate, the international LGBTQ wire service, Chris Azzopardi has interviewed a multitude of superstars, including Meryl Streep, Mariah Carey and Beyoncé. Reach him via his website at www.chris-azzopardi.com and on Twitter (@chrisazzopardi).
YOUR NEIGHBORHOOD • YOUR MARKET

Pinpoint your ad dollars where they will do the most good... Advertise in the next Cool Cities

TO PLACE AN AD CALL 734.293.7200

Lansing

SUBARU share the love EVENT
Let your love give back this season.

Get a great vehicle and support a great cause. With every new Subaru purchased or leased, Subaru will donate $250 to your choice of charities that benefit your local community. By the end of this, our 11th year, Subaru and its participating retailers will have donated over $140 million through the Share the Love Event. November 15 through January 2.

2018 Charity Partners
ASPCA
Make-A-Wish
Meals on Wheels
National Park Foundation
Humane Society
CAPITAL AREA

WILLIAMS

525 North Howard St., Lansing, MI 48912
Sales (866) 752-9939
www.lansingsubaru.com

*Subaru will donate $250 for every new Subaru vehicle sold or leased from November 15, 2018 through January 2, 2019, to four national charities designated by the purchaser or lessee. Pre-approved National Charities may be selected for donation depending on retailer participation. Certain participating retailers will make an additional donation to the National Charities selected. Purchasers/leasers must make their charity designations by January 21, 2019. The four national charities will receive a guaranteed minimum donation of $250,000 each. See your local Subaru retailer for details and to see participating charities. Additional information about Make-A-Wish Foundation of America is available by calling 1-800-663-1551 or by visiting the website at wish.org. All donations made by Subaru of America, Inc.

Donate.
Donations to the LCC Foundation
EDUCATE students, providing the talent and skills that ELEVATE our community.

Donate. Educate. Elevate lcc.edu/elevate

Prepare for this holiday season.
And next years, and the year after that...

Figuring out how to pay for everything this time of year can be stressful — but it doesn’t have to be. With a little planning, all your holidays can be merry and bright.

That’s where MSUFCU’s Holiday/Vacation Account can help.
It’s a special savings account where you can stash money all year long, helping you save for this festive season.

Open your Holiday/Vacation Account today!
msufcu.org/holidayvacation
Saturday, December 22
MCC Detroit – Christmas Elves Celebration! 1 p.m. We will be gathering with the families that we have adopted for Christmas to give them their gifts and share some holiday spirit. There will be MCC Detroit, 205 N. Main St., Clawson. 248-399-7741. mccdetroit.org.

Monday, December 24
MCCDetroit – Candlelight Christmas Eve Service 7 p.m. Join us for our annual candlelight Christmas Eve service. MCC Detroit, 205 N. Main St., Clawson. 248-399-7741. mccdetroit.org.

Tuesday, December 25
Strand with Trans Support Groups – Ann Arbor – Washtenaw 6:30 p.m. Parent Support Group Facilitator – Yma Johnson, yma968@gmail.com or 734-780-4092. Trans Youth Support Group Facilitator – Joy Cavanaugh, LPC. Journey of Faith Christian Church, 1900 Manchester Road, Ann Arbor. standwithtrans.org.

Wednesday, December 26
MCC Detroit – GenderSpark Monthly Program 7 p.m. Founded by a group of trans-identified folks and their loved ones. The group’s message is essentially that you don’t have to choose between your identity and your spirituality. MCC Detroit, 205 N. Main St., Clawson. 248-399-7741. mccdetroit.org.

Thursday, December 27
Stand with Trans 2018 Support Groups – Farmington Hills – Oakland County 7 p.m. All youth are welcome to attend this free group. Oakland United Methodist Church, 30450 Farmington Road, Farmington. 248-626-3620. oaklandumc.org. standwithtrans.org.

Tuesday, January 1
Stand with Trans 2018 Support Groups – Lake Orion / Oakland County 7 p.m. Free and open to the community. For parents of transgender kids, this group meets the 1st Tuesday of each month @ St. Mary’s In-the-Hills Episcopal Church.

Thursday, January 3
Pride Night at Thunderbowl! 7 p.m. Meet & Greet First Thursday of every month, unlimited bowling, shoe rental, private room, private bar area, drink specials, billiard room, 250 foot video wall. Come as you are! Thunderbowl Arena, 4200 Allen Road, Allen Park. 313-928-4688. thunderbowl.org.

Sunday, January 6
MCCDetroit Testimony Sunday 11:30 a.m. Join us as we reflect on God’s

2018 Detroit Winter Avant-Garde Art & Craft Show

Last-minute holiday shopping can be highly stressful, but with the Farmington Hills-based Detroit Winter Avant-Garde Art & Craft Show’s wares available, there’s a chance to find a gift for art lovers everywhere. This year the event will be held on Sunday, Dec. 23 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Studio Center, located at 23689 Industrial Park Drive in Farmington Hills. Find out more by emailing amanda@ag-shows.com. Admission is $3.
Editor’s Pick

Trans-Siberian Orchestra at Little Caesars Arena Dec. 29

Made a holiday tradition by millions of fans across the globe, Trans-Siberian Orchestra is a holiday staple for fans of both holiday and rock music alike. This year is the group’s 20th anniversary tour, commemorating their millions of records sold and hugely popular event. For more information about the performance go online to 313presents.com. Tickets start at $48.25.

MUSIC & MORE

Christmas Market at the Antoin Art Center 10am Shop with us for unique gifts and holiday decor by Michigan artists! The Holiday Market is the Art Center’s largest juried indoor artist market. Antoin Art Center, 125 McAmis Place, Mount Clemens. 586-469-8666 information@artcenter.org information@artcenter.org holiday-market

New Holiday Belles House Tour at Ford House 12 p.m. With replica holiday décor and new stories, this new tour gives you a glimpse into the society scene of the 1960’s. Edsel & Eleanor Ford House, 11001 12 Mile Rd., Grosse Pointe Shores. 313-884-4222 info@fordhouse.org

Home for the Holidays December 21, 10:45 a.m. Share Detroit’s favorite holiday musical tradition with family and friends and thrill to the spectacle of the season. Orchestra Hall, 3711 Woodward Ave., Detroit. 313-576-5111 doc.org

MCC Detroit – Fellowship Friday 6-30 p.m. Come join our gathering of music lovers who share in song, prayer and a meal. Held in the Fellowship Hall. MCC Detroit, 205 N. Main St., Clawson. 248-399-7741. mccdetroit.org

MCC Detroit – Christmas Elves Celebration! Dec. 22, 1 p.m. Come and join us for an amazing holiday time. MCC Detroit, 205 N. Main Street, Clawson. 248-399-7741. mccdetroit.org

THEATER

THE ELVES AND THE SCHUMACHERS by Carla Milarch and R. MacKenzie Lewis World Premiere Theatre NOVA, 410 W. Haron, Ann Arbor. 734-635-8450. AZTheatreNOVA@gmail.com

Disney’s Aladdin at the Detroit Opera House! Thu Jan 12, 7:30 p.m. Detroit Opera House, 1526 Broadway St., Detroit. 313-237-3900 broadwayindetroit.com

Williston Theatre Presents ‘A Hunting Shack Christmas’ Thu Dec. 23, 8 p.m. Charlie heads up to the hunting shack that’s been in his family for generations, hoping for the peace he needs to sort out his life. Williston Theatre, 122 S. Putnam Road, Williston. 517-655-SHOW info@willistontheatre.org

The Purple Rose Theatre Presents’ Diva Royale’ Thu Dec. 29, 8 p.m. The play follows the exploits of three midwestern stay-at-home moms who plan a last minute trip to NYC to see their favorite star CeCe Dion perform and maybe experience a bit of the romance. Purple Rose of Chelsea, 137 Park Street, Chelsea. 734-433-7673 info@purplerosetheatre.org

Evidence of Things Unseen at The Detroit Repertory Theatre Thu Dec. 23, 8:30 p.m. Two sisters, Abigail, an investigative journalist and atheist and Jane, a stay-at-home mom and born-again Christian, are in an intimate family story. Detroit Repertory Theatre, 13103 Woodrow Wilson, Detroit. 313-868-1347. DetRepTh@aol.com

‘Rent’ is Back at The Fisher Theatre – 20th Anniversary Tour! Thu Jan 20, 8 p.m. A re-imagining of Puccini’s La Bohème, RENT follows an unforgettable year in the lives of seven artists struggling to follow their dreams without selling out. Fisher Theatre, 301 W. Grand Blvd., Detroit. 313-872-1000. broadwayindetroit.com

A2CT Presents “Othello” Thu Jan. 13, 7:30 p.m. In a musical adaptation of the Dickens novel, young Olvier runs away to London. Where he falls in with the Artful Dodger, and through him, the shady Fagin, but this is just the start. A2CT Studio Theatre, 322 W. Ann St., Ann Arbor. 734-971-2228 a2ct.org/shows/oliver

The House on Poe Street at The Detroit Repertory Theatre Thu March 16, 8:30 p.m. Gothic ghosts encounter modern monstrosities when twin sisters inherit the house where Poe is reputed to have composed The Raven. Detroit Repertory Theatre, 13103 Woodrow Wilson, Detroit. 313-868-1347. DetRepTh@aol.com

www.PrideSource.com

THE HIT BROADWAY MUSICAL

NOW THRU JAN. 13

D 0T R E P T O R Y T H E A T R E

BroadwayInDetroit • Ticketmaster.com • CALL 866-878-8000
VISIT OPERA HOUSE & Fisher Theatre box offices – 10 a.m. – 6 p.m. Jan. 6

THE HOUSE ON POE STREET by FENGAR GAEDEL

ART ‘N’ AROUND

Holiday Art Shop at Ann Arbor Art Center Opens November 16! Thu Dec. 31, 10 a.m. Support local artists this holiday season by shopping for one-of-a-kind gifts from the Art Center’s gallery shop! Ann Arbor Art Center, 117 W. Liberty St., Ann Arbor. 734-994-8004 annarborartcenter.org

Christmas Market at the Antoin Art Center Thu Dec. 22, 10 a.m. The Holiday Market is the Art Center’s largest juried indoor artist market. Antoin Art Center, 125 McAmis Place, Mount Clemens. 586-469-8666. information@artcenter.org

Pewabic Holiday Showcase Thu Dec. 30, 10 a.m. Pewabic presents new ceramic giftware and featured holiday favorites and other pieces only available this time of year. Pewabic Pottery, 10125 E. Jefferson Ave., Detroit. 313-626-2000. pewabic.org
New Year’s Eve is a time to reflect, cleanse and get pumped for starting anew, but that happy train could crash and burn if you don’t avoid these countdown-to-disaster no-nos.

1 Drunk texting your exes
Nothing good will come from this. Best-case scenario, you bump uglies after the ball drops, but then you’re starting the New Year in a state of regression instead of progression. Worst case, he ignores you, leaves you on “Read”, and you keep texting him like the psychopath you might be until you pass out in a puddle of your own piss and self-pity. Do yourself a favor and resolve to leave the past in the past this time around. Block and delete all the formers lovers that have the uncanny ability to turn you into a lunatic after a few ounces of liquor hit your system. There are plenty of fish in the sea, remember, but you won’t find new ones if you keep dipping your dick in the same shallow pond.

2 Booking a harbor cruise
After spending a couple New Year’s Eves teetering on the brink of frostbite in Times Square, I booked a cruise around the New York Harbor for a change of pace. Big mistake. What started out as a benign evening of dining, dancing and open bar gradually digressed into a nightmare scenario on the USS Get Me Off This Fucking Boat. That’s what happens when you pump a hundred 20-somethings full of booze, run out of alcohol mid-cruise, and offer no reasonable escape. Bottles were broken, punches were thrown, mascara-filled tears drenched sparkly party blouses. It was like that...
Making last-minute plans

You really ought to have your NYE plans locked down by now lest you want to be left out in the cold (literally) or spend more than you should on price-hiked tickets to blowout club and hotel extravaganzas. The best events sell out quickly, and you won’t have the luxury of choosing wisely by delaying your decision on how to ring in the New Year. Wait too long and you may have no choice but to improvise on December 31, which is the first ingredient in a recipe for year-end disaster. During a year filled with notable lows, the last thing you need is to start Jan. 1 at rock bottom. Then again, the only way to go is up – right?

Making no plans

I used to put a lot of emphasis on having the BEST time on NYE, but after several memorable fiascos (I’m still traumatized by the cruise, and that was a decade ago), I decided to play NYE by ear on a holiday vacation to Hawaii – because it was Hawaii, and who needs anything else to do but Hawaii all night? Turns out Hawaii is just like every other place on the planet during the year’s last hurray: a cesspool of drunken aholes, long lines, huge covers and cheap champagne (if you can even get a drink). With that, I discovered that NYE plans are important (as is making them early), whatever they may be. I much prefer lower-key New Year’s Eves with my boyfriend these days, but having something on the books is required. I’ve been without plans in the past, and all that did was distract from the good time we could have had because we ended up bickering about where to go and what to do before giving up, slamming doors to separate rooms, and drunk texting exes – a great lesson in itself on learning how to take my own advice.

Hooking up with a rando

For many of us – OK, most of us – a night out, especially on an important occasion like NYE, isn’t successful unless we’ve bagged someone to bang. While that’s fine any other day of the year, there’s way too much significance attached to this holiday to kick off the New Year with kicking someone out of your bed. Do yourself a favor and be content with your own company on NYE. Beat your dick before you go out, delete Grindr from your phone, and stay present in the moment for once. Celebrate with your friends then go home satisfied with yourself that you don’t need a fuckboi to validate your contentment or attractiveness. Sure, it’s probably a change of pace from how you normally treat yourself, but isn’t it about time?

Drinking and driving

You know better. And there’s no reason you should be behind the wheel intoxicated when ride-sharing and taxi services are available in abundance (and sometimes free or discounted on New Year’s Eve) and family or friends are willing to pick you up and deliver you home safely. Keep the car parked and enjoy your night. Happy New Year!

Mike Rox is an award-winning journalist and LGBT lifestyle expert whose work has been published in more than 100 outlets across the world. He spends his time writing from the beach with his dog Jaxon. Connect with Mikey on Instagram @mikeyrox.
Holiday Yoga to Benefit Affirmations

Hosted by Chela Yoga from Waterford, all Affirmations-supporting community members are encouraged to come by on Monday, Dec. 24 from 9 to 10 a.m. to participate in a holiday-inspired yoga session. The Christmas Eve event will allow participants not only to donate money, but have a centering experience and get to know the Ferndale-based LGBTQ community center.

“(There is a) $10.00 suggested donation, with all proceeds going to Affirmations,” wrote event organizers. “For more information about Affirmations please visit their website at goaffirmations.org.”

This yoga class is gentle. Find out more on the affirmations Facebook page.

Fox Theatre’s ‘Christmas Story’ to Donate to Michigan Humane Society

DETROIT — “A Christmas Story, The Musical” has announced a local partnership with the Michigan Humane Society during their Fox Theatre engagement running Dec. 20 through 22. In honor of the stage production’s two featured rescue dogs, Stella and Hoss, who play “The Bumpus Hounds,” each ticket purchased now through Dec. 22 at 6 p.m., using the code “MHS” will help raise funds to support the organization’s mission to improve and save lives through compassionate care, community engagement and advocacy for animals.

The Michigan Humane Society, founded in 1877, is the oldest and largest nonprofit animal welfare organization in the state. Each year, MHS achieves 100 percent placement of more than 10,000 healthy and treatable animals through compassionate care, community engagement, and advocacy for humane treatment. The MHS operates three shelter and veterinary centers in Detroit, Rochester Hills and Westland; five adoption partnerships with Premier Pet Supply, Petco and PetSmart; and both a Cruelty Investigation Department and a Statewide Animal Response Team.

“A Christmas Story, The Musical,” brings the classic 1983 movie to life on stage. Set in 1940s Indiana, a young and bespectacled Ralphie Parker schemes his way toward the holiday gift of his dreams: an official Red Ryder Carbine-Action 200-Shot Range Model Air Rifle. An infamous leg lamp, outrageous pink bunny pajamas, a maniacal department store Santa and a triple-dog-dare to lick a freezing flagpole are just a few of the distractions that stand between Ralphie and his Christmas wish.

Learn more at michiganhumane.org. To purchase Humane Society-supporting tickets customers must use the promo code “MHS” at Ticketmaster.com. The offer is valid on select price levels and performances and is not valid on previously purchased tickets. There is a 6-ticket limit per purchase. Some restrictions and fees may apply.

Hydrate Detroit Works to Fend Off Detroit Water Shut-Offs

This holiday season, hundreds of families in Detroit will not have clean water running through their homes, due to impending Detroit Water and Sewage Department shut-offs. Hydrate Detroit, a local 501(c)(3) water rights organization, would like to “Give the Gift of Water Restoration” to ensure that families and seniors who cannot afford to pay their water bills are able to enjoy a fully hydrated home throughout the holiday season. It is encouraging anyone who can to give to the organization via an online fundraiser to pay water bills.

“While we may not be able to afford everyone’s water bill, we can try our best to be a blessing to some who are in the greatest need,” said Demeeko Williams, Chief Director of Hydrate Detroit.

Even beyond water for cooking and bathing, Detroit has homes that are outfitted with water-based heat radiators that rely on water to fend off the winter chill. Donors would be giving charitable resources to help keep families maintain with clean running water through the winter months.

“The proceeds will be applied straight to the water bill accounts of pre-selected families at the Detroit Water and Sewage Department for restoration fees,” said a Hydrate Detroit press release. “Donors can help adopt a family or sponsor to help a family clear out their high water bill debt.”

For more information go online to hydratedetroit.org or by following the group’s Facebook page.
We are committed to provide quality health care and to serve our patients without regard to race, nationality, ethnicity, gender, religion, political preferences, or sexual orientation.

It is our intention not to discriminate, be judgmental, or have bias towards anyone. These are not simply published words, but are practices we strive and train for to do our best each and every day. We must all be respectful and put our commonalities first. Our priority is your good health.

We are here to help you and want each and every one of our patrons to feel comfortable in our patient-centered medical home. It is this essence of equality that defines who we are. Please join us in this endeavor.

1964 Eleven Mile Road, Berkley, MI 48072 • 248-544-9300 • www.doctorbewolf.com

Primary Care • HIV Rapid initiation of Therapy • PrEP • Hormone Affirming Therapy
Wanda Sykes

SAT., FEB. 9, 2019
Detroit Music Hall

Purchase tickets at Livenation.com or charge by phone 800-745-3000

Music Hall
350 MADISON STREET, DETROIT

LIVE NATION