Robyn Keeps You Guessing

She’s ‘Dragging’ As Femme. And Her Music Is Ever-Morphing. Why the Gay Icon Will Never Succumb to Expectations.
17th Annual HotWorks.org

Orchard Lake Fine Art Show®

July 27 & 28, 2019

West Bloomfield, Michigan

Juried Fine Art & Fine Craft Show – All Art is Original & Personally Handmade
Voted Top 100 Art Shows in America
Event Hours Saturday, 10am-6pm & Sunday 10am-5pm – $5 Admission; 13 & under free
Plus Bath Planet’s Youth Art Competition for K-8 or Ages 5-13 – $250 cash awards!

Powers & Daly Rds, S. of Maple, W. of Orchard Lake Rd ~ Free parking in the back half of the lot at Beaumont Medical Center, 6900 Orchard Lake Rd

BRING THIS AD FOR $2 OFF ONE ADMISSION
NEWS
4 History Wheel: 2009
6 Hotter Than July 2019
10 Kofi House: Ruth Ellis Center Unveils Plans for Lesbian-Specific Facility for Fall 2019
14 EQMI Announces 2019 Fall Reception
14 Transcend the Binary Hosts Trans/Gender Diverse Camp
14 LGBT Activist to Take Part in NAACP Panel Discussion
14 Sen. Moss Responds to SCOTUS Allowing One-Sided Maps to Remain
14 MDHHS Launches Statewide Lead Awareness Campaign
16 Victory Fund Endorses Out Gay for Colorado Senate Seat
18 8 Ways to Make Your Wedding Green
20 17th Annual Orchard Lake Fine Arts Show Features Gay Artist Don Tran

OPINION
10 Parting Glances
10 Viewpoint: The Fight for LGBTQ Equality is Far From Over
11 Creep of the Week: Donald Trump

LIFE
22 Robyn Keeps You Guessing
26 Back to the City
34 Slipstream Does ‘The Merry Wives of Miami’
35 Fall in Love With ‘Crazy For You’ at the Encore
26 Deep Inside Hollywood
28 Cool Cities: Ann Arbor
29 Ann Arbor Pride Coming Aug. 3
32 Happenings
37 Crossword Puzzle

Our rate cards are available online. All material appearing in Between The Lines is protected by federal copyright law and may not be reproduced in whole or part without the permission of the publishers. Between The Lines is supported by many fine advertisers, but we cannot accept responsibility for claims made by our advertisers, nor can we accept responsibility for materials provided by advertisers or their agents.

Copyright 2019

www.PrideSource.com
2001: The Triangle Foundation worked closely with State Rep. Buzz Thomas (D-Detroit) and other legislative leaders to introduce the first-ever bill to address bullying in public schools. In July, Michigan’s State Board of Education passed an anti-bullying policy directive.

2002: Michigan House committee holds the only hearing on the bill. Matt Epling, an East Lansing eighth-grader, committed suicide after a hazing incident. His parents Kevin and Tammy began raising awareness about the attitudes and the culture surrounding bullying, hazing and harassment in schools.

2003: There is a re-introduction of anti-bullying legislation in the Michigan House and Senate known as Matt’s Safe Schools Law. A Senate Republican told the Triangle Foundation that as long as gay kids are covered by the bill it will not move.

2005: Anti-bullying legislation is reintroduced by Sen. Buzz Thomas (D-Detroit) and State

2006: In January, Gov. Jennifer Granholm urges the passage of anti-bullying legislation in her State of the State Address. In March, Safe Schools Lobby Day is attended by more than 100 citizen lobbyists. By summertime, the State Board of Education voted unanimously to require school districts to pass inclusive anti-bullying policies. The Safe Schools Coalition developed legislative strategy on pro-gay legislation, including the anti-bullying bill.

2007: In January, State Sen. Glenn Anderson (D-Westland) re-introduces Matt’s Safe Schools Law. The bill was expanded to include bullying over the internet, either on school grounds or via a school-provided internet service.

2008: Sen. Alan Cropsey (R-Dewitt) says he will not allow anti-bullying legislation to pass the Michigan Senate. The Republican Senate was ready to move on the bill when Cropsey blocked it. From 2001 until early December 2008, supporters stress that the bill has to enumerate, or specify, the protected classes covered by legislation. Supporters of enumeration said that without it, the proposed legislation lacks teeth. Disagreements over language of the bill caused it to be rewritten and die several times in both the House of Representatives and the Senate.

2009: The Safe Schools Coalition is split apart amid a decision by some of the coalition’s members to change course and begin supporting a version of the bill that does not specify LGBT students as being protected by the bill. Once again, Cropsey, the majority floor leader, refused to allow the Michigan Senate to vote on the bill.

2010: Michigan remains just one of five states without an anti-bullying law. The Senate does not move on Matt’s Safe Schools Law, continuing a stalemate that lasts for a decade.

2011: The state of Michigan finally passes anti-bullying legislation, but the bill comes under fire again while it was in the Senate when Republicans try to include an exemption for those who hold “sincerely held religious belief or moral conviction.” Dubbed the “license to bully” bill, Republicans ultimately drop the amendment after significant backlash on a national level. The language included all students and prohibits bullying “without regard to its subject matter or motivating animus.” The long-debated anti-bullying legislation was signed into law by Gov. Rick Snyder on Dec. 6, 2011, making Michigan the 48th state to have an anti-bullying law.
CONGRATULATIONS TO THE 2019 ADPOP AWARDS WINNERS
For excellence in advertising to the LGBTQ Community in Between The Lines
Present June 30 aboard the Portofino Yacht

UNIVERSITY MUSICAL SOCIETY
For their production of the provocative and new work Triptyche, a multi-media production based on the work of famed photographer Robert Mapplethorpe. Composer Bryce Dresser, poet Essex Hemphill and Patti Smith explored the eroticism of an inspiration for Mapplethorpe’s images. Accepted by Mallory Shea of UMS, pictured with her husband.

DR. PAUL BENSON AND BE WELL MEDICAL CENTER
Dr. Benson was one of the first medical doctors to focus on the AIDS epidemic in Detroit. He helped found the first Wellness Networks and Wellness House, and continues to serve people affected by HIV/AIDS with education outreach and medical care.

WAYNE STATE UNIVERSITY DEPARTMENT OF THEATRE AND DANCE
For their production of Tony Kushner’s “Angels In America,” winner of both a Pulitzer Prize and Tony Award. Accepted by WSU’s Matthew Jared Lee.

TITO'S VODKA
Clever, Fun, Joyful and Irreverent – that’s how I’d describe the Tito’s campaign this year in BTL. Tito’s is a leader among businesses reaching out to the LGBTQ community.

MATRIX-MAC HEALTH
For their outreach in BTL with images and ads to raise awareness of testing, case management, advocacy and education – all pillars of the fight against HIV/AIDS for decades. Accepted by Kathy Griffin and Royale Theus accepted the award.

Past Awardees
2018 ADPOP WINNERS
American Mattress, AT&T Michigan, Broadway in Detroit, The Fisher theater, created by Simons Michaelson Zieve, Diamond Castle jewellers, Hagopian World of Rugs, MotorCity Casino Hotel and Sound Board, created by Campbell Ewald, Michigan Department of Health & Human Services, created by Brogan & Partners, MSU Federal Credit Union, University Musical Society

2018 LEGACY AWARD WINNERS
For advertising since the inception of BTL 25 years ago: Amerifax Mls, aut Bar and Common Language, The Ark, Gerry Banister, Realtor, Dr. Paul Benson and Be Well Medical Center, Hodges Subaru, Holiday Market, Joe Kort, PhD, Neir Leather, Lynn Stango, Realtor, Triangle Chiropractic, Trillium Real Estate, Ron Williamson, DDS

2017 ADPOP WINNERS
He's the new project coordinator for Hotter Than July and he's making things happen; Jerron Totten is planning a big HTJ this year. He has also served as LGBT Detroit's legislative advocacy specialist and social outreach coordinator since April.

"I was initially introduced to LGBT Detroit two years ago when I was on a trip to assist a friend who ran for Detroit City Council," Totten said. "I immediately fell in love with the organization."

After falling in love, it wasn't long before Totten was coordinating Detroit's black gay Pride. However, he said it hasn't been without its difficulties. Specifically, in planning such a big event Totten said he has struggled to include community input from as many voices as possible — something that he says is vital.

"I think it's important to engage the community as much as possible when attempting to create such an event for the community to enjoy," he said.

Despite that struggle, however, Totten said that planning HTJ has ultimately been a rewarding and enjoyable experience.

"It has been tedious at times as you have an entire community looking to you to deliver good, relevant programming," he said. "Overall, working with community members to make sure this year's HTJ goes well has been an experience that I wouldn't trade for anything."

New and different

This year, Totten said HTJ will feature three new events, about which he is very excited. On Wednesday, July 24, there will be a mixer at Granite City Brewery from 6 to 9 p.m. "This was formerly the opening party and resource fair," Totten explained. "We wanted this to be an event where LGBT Detroit can engage with HTJ attendees and community members in a more relaxed and social environment."

"Additionally, we have added a sip and paint event which will feature a nude male model," Totten continued. "We are very excited about this new event and we're confident in its success."

The sip and paint event will be held on Sunday, July 28, at 6:30 p.m. at LGBT Detroit.

Finally, the third new event will be a career fair at Saturday's picnic in Palmer Park. That's the event Totten said he is most looking forward to.

"As it is HTJ's flagship event, we are always happy to see the over 10,000 people that attend," he said. "There's this strong communal feeling when you get that many people in this very specific demographic in one place."

The House Stage this year will feature DJ Tone, DJ Darryl G, DJ Tony Peoples, DJ Fred and Ms. Honey. The Main Soundstage will be hosted by Ramon and Dolly The Mayor with DJ Romeo. Featured on the Main Soundstage will be Fitness by Julie, Cierra Malone, J Jacobee, Deriko, Lambo, Nick Ferrari, Phresh Syndicate, Myles Simmons, B. Ward, Donald Lamb and Brandon Barz.

"While many aren't new to the HTJ Soundstage, some will be making their HTJ debut," Totten said. "We appreciate all of them for sharing their time and talents with us."

And for his efforts Totten has earned a great deal of appreciation himself. Longtime HTJ planning committee member Robert Tate commended Totten on his ability to put the event together.

"I think he's doing a really good job to have just stepped in and pull off everything," Tate said. "It's been working pretty good together with no complaints. He's doing a really good job."

The complete Hotter Than July schedule is as follows:

Tuesday, July 23
- Candlelight Vigil
  - 6 p.m. to dusk
  - Admittance: Free
  - Merrill Plaisance Street and Woodward Avenue and Blue Spruce Memorial Tree, Palmer Park, Detroit

Wednesday, July 24
- Hotter Than July Mixer at Granite City Brewery
  - 6 to 9 p.m.
  - Admittance: Free Admission, Cash Bar
  - Granite City Brewery, 100 Renaissance Center Suite 1101, Detroit

Thursday, July 25
- From Stonewall to Heaven: Dinner and Learning at Hotter Than July
  - 7 to 10 p.m.
  - Admittance: $5, limited to 30 RSVPs
  - The Marvin Lee Social Justice Center, 20021 Greenfield Road, Detroit

This event will feature a panel discussion looking at 50 years of LGBT activism.
It's had many names throughout the years, but this conference is a traditional part of the Hotter Than July celebration. This year, the event will look at the topic of building coalitions in LGBT communities of color and the future of gender.

Friday, July 26
Hotter Than July Annual Summit
9 a.m. to 4 p.m.
Admittance: $75
The Marvin Lee Social Justice Center, 20021 Greenfield Road, Detroit

Friday, July 26
Hotter Than July SWEAT Masquerade Party
by DJ Tony Peoples
8 p.m. to Midnight
Admittance: $15
The Marvin Lee Social Justice Center, 20021 Greenfield Road, Detroit

Saturday, July 27
Palmer Park Picnic
10 a.m. to 8 p.m.
Admittance: Free
The flagship event of Hotter Than July, the picnic will feature a career fair, onsite HIV testing, two stages full of entertainment and much more.

Sunday, July 28
Worship Service
10 a.m. to 1 p.m.
Admittance: Free
Tindal Recreational Center, 10301 West Seven Mile Road, Detroit

Sunday, July 28
Sunday Brunch
Noon to 3 p.m.
Admittance: $25 and tickets must be purchased in advance.
The Charlevoix Gallery, 14505 Charlevoix St, Detroit

Sunday, July 28
Sip & Paint
6:30 p.m. to 10 p.m.
Admittance: $35, which includes all painting materials and two glasses of wine
LGBT Detroit, 20021 Greenfield Road, Detroit
Another new event this year, it’s sure to become a quick favorite.

For more information about the event, visit lgbtdetroit.org/hotterthanjuly.
IMPORTANT FACTS FOR BIKTARVY®
This is only a brief summary of important information about BIKTARVY and does not replace talking to your healthcare provider about your condition and your treatment.

MOST IMPORTANT INFORMATION ABOUT BIKTARVY

BIKTARVY may cause serious side effects, including:
- Worsening of Hepatitis B (HBV) infection. If you have both HIV-1 and HBV, your HBV may suddenly get worse if you stop taking BIKTARVY. Do not stop taking BIKTARVY without first talking to your healthcare provider, as they will need to check your health regularly for several months.

ABOUT BIKTARVY

BIKTARVY is a complete, 1-pill, once-a-day prescription medicine used to treat HIV-1 in adults. It can either be used in people who have never taken HIV-1 medicines before, or people who are replacing their current HIV-1 medicines and whose healthcare provider determines they meet certain requirements.

BIKTARVY does not cure HIV-1 or AIDS. HIV-1 is the virus that causes AIDS.

Do NOT take BIKTARVY if you also take a medicine that contains:
- dofetilide
- rifampin
- any other medicines to treat HIV-1

BEFORE TAKING BIKTARVY

Tell your healthcare provider if you:
- Have or have had any kidney or liver problems, including hepatitis infection.
- Have any other health problems.
- Are pregnant or plan to become pregnant. It is not known if BIKTARVY can harm your unborn baby. Tell your healthcare provider if you become pregnant while taking BIKTARVY.
- Are breastfeeding (nursing) or plan to breastfeed. Do not breastfeed. HIV-1 can be passed to the baby in breast milk.

Tell your healthcare provider about all the medicines you take:
- Keep a list that includes all prescription and over-the-counter medicines, antacids, laxatives, vitamins, and herbal supplements, and show it to your healthcare provider and pharmacist.
- BIKTARVY and other medicines may affect each other. Ask your healthcare provider and pharmacist about medicines that interact with BIKTARVY, and ask if it is safe to take BIKTARVY with all your other medicines.

POSSIBLE SIDE EFFECTS OF BIKTARVY

BIKTARVY may cause serious side effects, including:
- Those in the “Most Important Information About BIKTARVY” section.
- Changes in your immune system. Your immune system may get stronger and begin to fight infections. Tell your healthcare provider if you have any new symptoms after you start taking BIKTARVY.
- Kidney problems, including kidney failure. Your healthcare provider should do blood and urine tests to check your kidneys. If you develop new or worse kidney problems, they may tell you to stop taking BIKTARVY.
- Too much lactic acid in your blood (lactic acidosis), which is a serious but rare medical emergency that can lead to death. Tell your healthcare provider right away if you get these symptoms: weakness or being more tired than usual, unusual muscle pain, being short of breath or fast breathing, stomach pain with nausea and vomiting, cold or blue hands and feet, feel dizzy or lightheaded, or a fast or abnormal heartbeat.
- Severe liver problems, which in rare cases can lead to death. Tell your healthcare provider right away if you get these symptoms: skin or the white part of your eyes turns yellow, dark “tea-colored” urine, light-colored stools, loss of appetite for several days or longer, nausea, or stomach-area pain.
- The most common side effects of BIKTARVY in clinical studies were diarrhea (6%), nausea (6%), and headache (5%).

These are not all the possible side effects of BIKTARVY. Tell your healthcare provider right away if you have any new symptoms while taking BIKTARVY.

You are encouraged to report negative side effects of prescription drugs to the FDA. Visit www.FDA.gov/medwatch, or call 1-800-FDA-1088.

Your healthcare provider will need to do tests to monitor your health before and during treatment with BIKTARVY.

HOW TO TAKE BIKTARVY

Take BIKTARVY 1 time each day with or without food.

GET MORE INFORMATION

- This is only a brief summary of important information about BIKTARVY. Talk to your healthcare provider or pharmacist to learn more.
- Go to BIKTARVY.com or call 1-800-GILEAD-5.
- If you need help paying for your medicine, visit BIKTARVY.com for program information.
BIKTARVY® is a complete, 1-pill, once-a-day prescription medicine used to treat HIV-1 in certain adults. BIKTARVY does not cure HIV-1 or AIDS.

Ask your healthcare provider if BIKTARVY is right for you. To learn more, visit BIKTARVY.com.

Please see Important Facts about BIKTARVY, including important warnings, on the previous page and visit BIKTARVY.com.
KOFI HOUSE:
Ruth Ellis Center Unveils Plans for Lesbian-Specific Facility

BY EVA KUCHARSKI

Walking through any LGBTQ-friendly metropolitan area in the U.S. it’s not hard to find a variety of gay bars. However, if one changes their destination to a lesbian-specific bar, the likelihood of seeking one out goes down drastically. So much so, that a 2017 Market Watch article cited New York, a city of roughly 8.5 million people, as having only one. The starkness of those odds was not lost on the Ruth Ellis Center’s Director of Programs Pamela Alexander who said she’s observed this exact trend in Detroit. And she said it extends beyond the bar scene, she’s been feeling a lack of lesbian-inclusive spaces for roughly a decade now.

“At one time in our history in the gay community lesbians did have their places to go, whether it was through social networking, private organizations and so forth. And with Affirmations up the street, there were a lot of groups related to the lesbian community; socializing in bars and stuff like that was pretty much the norm,” she said. “But over the last decade, that has dramatically changed. And so, there are less spaces available and not only that, but in general, the community is feeling a lack of lesbian-inclusive spaces.”

To fight that loss, Alexander has been leading the charge over the past year for REC to expand its existing LGBTQ services to a branch dedicated to helping lesbian- and queer-identified women find a safe space to call their own. And as of June, REC officially approved a strategic plan for an expanded space, scheduled its soft opening for fall 2019 and its full debut for 2020. Alexander filled BTL in about REC’s expansion of services and why a space like this is necessary in Detroit.

Kofi House

Though its programs and services are still in development, two things that are certain are the building’s location and its name. Just two miles from the existing Ruth Ellis Center, REC’s expanded offerings will be in a house donated by Detroit LGBTQ activist John Kavanaugh and it will be called the Kofi House, bearing the name of Dr. Kofi Adoma. Known by some as Amorie Robinson, Adoma is a Detroit native, a licensed clinical psychologist, a founding member of REC and a staunch activist for Detroit’s LGBTQ community.

“Mr. Kavanaugh, who donated the house to our agency, wanted the house named after her. And so, what I feel will be a nice complement to that is to have this women’s program to be located there,” Alexander said. “And what we are looking to do in general is to make sure that young people have access to behavioral health and medical health services. In general, education will be a component, leadership development will be a component and certainly navigating around relationships.”

Additionally, the center will have services centered around arts and entertainment, entrepreneurship and life skill building. Alexander made sure to emphasize, too, that the Kofi House will provide family services to young lesbian and queer moms without support — something that REC currently does not offer.

“We don’t do that here, period. So, where would a group of lesbian moms connect? And because we also have the family group decision-making program here, this will allow for our young moms who are having some challenges around parenting and so forth to connect with our family group decision-making program,” Alexander said. “And I can see what will also be a benefit is having an inter-generational component, meaning having younger queer women and moms have that connection with the older generation... allowing them to learn how to and to be open about sharing their own story. I’m hoping that will be part of it as well.”

The Center’s Namesake

Adoma herself is very supportive of the planned center, too. She said that when REC Executive Director Jerry Peterson first told her about the plans for the space and its name she was shocked.

“When Jerry told me the news, my head just started spinning; I was totally blown away. I was almost numb and speechless, I could barely believe that moment was happening,” she said. “He told me that the house was donated by...”
A Center Unlike Any Other

Adoma's expertise has also allowed her to be a contributor in part of the planning processes for the center. She said that before she learned of the upcoming facility she had never worked with another center quite like this one.

“Nor not anywhere. I’ve been across the country and I know that in Chicago there’s a group called Affinity and they have programs that are specific to women ... but that’s the closest that I’ve heard to such a program,” she said. “It sounds like this is such a unique goal to have. The center has had a history over the past eight years of invisibility of cisgender girls and young women. I mean, every time I went to the center, and I would visit when I could. I would see plenty of my beautiful cisgender boys and young men and my beautiful trans girls and trans women, but rarely did I see cisgender lesbians and bi-atractive girls, or female-bodied pansexual or nonbinary girls for that matter, and I had wondered where they were.”

Adoma said that she views the services that will be provided by the center as vital to the development of Detroit's lesbian- and queer-identified youth. In particular, because they don’t often have strong positive role models to look up to. Adoma said she hopes the Kofi House will help change that narrative.

“Studies have shown that girls often get the short end of the stick when it comes to receiving positive attention. They tend to get overlooked even in classrooms and they suffer from a disability a lot of times and they face risks just like other youths do, but so many girls, and particularly girls of color, are being caught up in the school-to-prison pipeline,” Adoma said. “The idea of a facility that houses programming specifically for girls and women that are often marginalized in the LGBT community is not only unique but essential.”

And in order to make sure the Kofi House is a place that has a range of robust social service-oriented programming all the way to fun social events, Alexander said she’s sought help from a variety of perspectives via an advisory committee.

“I am bringing together some really talented folks from the community that are either queer or lesbian who will help support this process through a community advisory committee,” she said. “[We’re] looking at some of the data related to girls and women, certainly some of the challenges around domestic violence and violence against women, period, and looking at some of the health factors related to this population.”

That’s an important part, too, because Alexander said that even to this day there are few statistics available that paint an accurate picture of what it’s like to live life as a modern-day lesbian- or queer-identified woman.

“The fact that there’s a limited number of spaces for lesbian and queer women, that factor may not change by creating this,” Alexander said. “However, I think what it will do is encourage people to have conversations about data that they don’t have around programming, that they don’t have and looking at numbers — particularly around black girls. Of those, who end up in the juvenile justice system? And what percentage of them identify [as lesbian or queer]? And if they identify, what supports are in place?”

Alexander said those are the questions the Kofi House will help answer.
Lost Language of S/he

This column first appeared in BTL June 5, 2014

A post-pubescent teenager growing up on Detroit’s Peterboro Street – just down the block from still-standing Burton Elementary School, recently turned movie and music theater venue – I spoke a made-up language called Quinish.

I have no idea why we who “spoke” it, I think that there were about three of us close buddies – one of whom I was more than aurally intimate with, that called it Quinish.

In a neighborhood somewhat streety and just a little, watch-out! Rough and tumble. Our shared secret language acted as both bonding and buffer. All for one. One for each other. Call the Quinish Embassy! Ereh omesc rouble!

Maybe the Quinish title gave our conversation an international flavor and conferred upon us speakers a certain hoped for worldly sophistication (It was cheaper and faster than memorizing Berlitz Spanish body parts and cuss words. Cajones, notwithstanding.)

We speakers of Quinish were under the delusion that it kept our devious plans and caustic commentary about too noisy adults off-limits to them. And! Quinish was simplicity itself. Take the first letter of a word, put it at the end of that word, and speak the hybrid vowel-cruncher as fast as possible.

There were of course competing “secret” street languages. Pig Latin, and more than likely still in the intellectual acumen of most of my PG readers. There’s also Carney Talk, a patois of sideshow barkers who needed to identify the proverbial, “There’s a sucker born every minute.”

QUI(N)ISH: Et-guh hoos-wuh werewuh. PIG LATIN: Et-gay Oos-hay Were-quey. CARNEY TALK: Gee-as sit Who-as-zits G-as-ay! (Excuse my ineptness with Get-Who’s-Gay requisite accents. My language skills are somewhat rustic, er, rusty with age and viable cocktail party or brunch usage opportunities.)

It pleases me to no end – six decades now since speaking historic Quinish – to hear occasionally spoken these days the lost Language of S/he. For many of us old timers it is the language of gay/lesbian survival. The verbal tool for honing our Goddess-given, innate gaydar. Closet speak that often works.

(Do keep it in mind, that there actually was a time, mid-twentieth-century, when one could coyly ask the question, “Are you gay?” And, believe it or not, get the frequent answer, “Yes! I’m happy aren’t you?”) As for the lost Language of S/he: it is, like Quinish, camouflage itself.

If you want to keep straight out of your personal, private, romantic or sexual business, simply change your pronouns, substituting she for he; or, vice versa, he for she, if you play golf, rugby or touch football.

The Fight for LGBTQ Equality is Far From Over

BY SUSAN GRETTENBERGER

Summer is finally getting here! That means Pride celebrations are well underway. Vacations are coming. It is time to just reveal in being a member of the LGBTQ community. Time to kick back and just enjoy all the progress we’ve made, right? Not so fast... We have made considerable progress in being treated like people, but our rights are far from secure. We need to elect people who believe discrimination against others, for any reason, is just wrong and will fight for our rights. You are needed for that to happen. It takes all of us. Let me share a personal story to show you what I am talking about.

Twenty years ago, adopting my children meant going to the child welfare agency other gays were recommending as gay-friendly. That agency was in Detroit. It was not at all clear the hometown agencies in Lansing, all faith-based, would approve our lesbian parents. As a social worker, I knew the ropes but knew the risk of being turned down.

Over the years, it got easier, almost routine, for same-sex couples to adopt. Then gay marriage was legalized, and our community was home free on adoption! But, sadly, no. Not long afterward, a few Michigan faith-based agencies pushed our gerrymandered legislature into passing a law allowing them to reject people for religious reasons (read between the lines – LGBTQ parents) as long as they told them of other agencies. I and others testified against the law, but it passed because of who was in the legislature voting. Here’s where you come in. If it had been a different group of elected officials, it would not have passed.

Politics and legal things are slow and complicated, so here’s the short version of what happened next:

1.) The ACLU brought a lawsuit against the law allowing faith-based adoption agencies to not work with us.

2.) Then we helped elect Dana Nessel, an out lesbian, as Michigan’s attorney general and Gretchen Whitmer, a friend of our community, as governor.

3.) Nessel settled the lawsuit, telling the agencies they can’t use Michigan taxpayers’ money if they refuse to serve LGBTQ foster and adoptive parents.

4.) A lawsuit was immediately filed on behalf of the faith-based agencies, pushing back against Nessel’s settlement. That is still being resolved.

So, there it is. We need different laws, which takes different elected officials. Your vote is your voice, so first, always vote. We have some great candidates running for office in Michigan including several LGBTQ candidates. They need help to win. They need your help. Help looks like one or more of these things: your money, even if it’s just a little; your time working on the election starting as soon as you can; and, finally, your vote and encouragement of others to get out and vote for your candidates.

I’ve heard a lot of people ask, “Why bother? My little bit doesn’t change anything.” But it does! Every little bit matters. Every dollar, every hour, every vote counts. Like adding drops of water to a bucket, voices to the cheering crowd at a game or people on your side of the rope in a tug of war, at some point one more drop will push the water over the top of the bucket, one more voice will tip the balance over the sound of the opposing team or one more person on the rope pulls your team past the dividing line in the tug of war. In other words, every person’s contribution adds up, and makes the final difference.

Gretchen Whitmer had 2,266,193 to Bill Schuette’s 1,859,534. Someone had the 1,859,535th vote that put Whitmer past Schuette as she sought to be governor and every vote after that made the win stronger. But it took 1,859,535 people voting for her before she could pass Schuette for the win with that one vote. It took countless people volunteering thousands of hours and donating over $12 Million. Each one mattered.

If you want elected officials who speak for you, do what you can to get them elected. At many Prides and other festivals this year, you will see materials for LGBTQ candidates and others who are allies. Look for the booth for the Michigan Democratic Party, which is supporting multiple LGBTQ candidates or the candidate booths. Sign up to help between now and November 2020. It may make all the difference.

Professionally, Susan Grettengerber is a social work professor at Central Michigan University. She is politically active because she believes our elected officials should be fighting for ALL of us and for the future of our planet. Susan volunteers as a Vice-chair of the MDIP LGBTQ Caucus.

Charles suffered a stroke on Memorial Day and is recovering at Henry Ford Village Rehab Center. He has begun to paint again and has gained much strength. Those who love him are all hoping for a near-full recovery in the coming months.
Which Stonewall? Whose Stonewall?

BY TIM RETZLOFF

“Ho Ho! Hey Hey! We won't pay to be gay!”

The chant, led by Vivian Thompson on a bullhorn and in unison with a couple dozen or so other protesters, announced the stance of Lansing People’s Pride as they marched on June 17 through Old Town, home to this year’s Michigan Pride celebration.

According to City Pulse, the gay, straight and trans group was demonstrating specifically against the $10 donation/entry fee asked by the organizers of the Michigan Pride festival, and more generally against the event’s ties to corporate sponsors and the U.S. police-state. They offered a non-commercial, countercultural and highly politicized alternative to the official festivities.

Fifty years after Stonewall, Lansing People’s Pride captured much of the character and spirit of the original Stonewall uprising: youthful, diverse, angry yet campy, outcast, disruptive, with people who defied conventional gender expectations at the forefront, people we might now identify and who would likely now identify themselves as transgender.

In June 1969, patrons of the Stonewall Inn in Greenwich Village fought back against yet another routine police raid of a gay bar, triggering several nights of rioting and, subsequently, inspiring new queer organizing on a mass scale across the country.

Tens of millions recognize Stonewall each year as the milestone event that launched the movement. Or Gay Liberation. Depending on your perspective and politics.

Inside the fenced-in area of Michigan Pride, a non-commercial, countercultural and highly politicized alternative to the official festivities.

BY D’ANNE WITKOWSKI

Creep Of The Week

Donald Trump

“I’m not going to the fucking White House.” Have more beautiful words ever been spoken by a world champion before?

Megan Rapinoe of the U.S. Women’s National Soccer Team said those words before her team won the World Cup. And now that they’ve won, she’s not backing down.

“I stand by the comments that I made about not wanting to go to the White House with the exception of the expletive,” Rapinoe said at a press conference. “My mom will be really upset about that.”

Regardless, I am sure her mom is really fucking proud of her.

Rapinoe continued, “I would encourage my teammates to think hard about lending that platform or having that co-opted by an administration that doesn’t feel the same way, that doesn’t fight for the same things that we fight for.”

In other words, everything Trump touches turns to white supremacist mediocrity topped with a handful or two of misogyny.

But the only reason Rapinoe and Team USA, after working so hard to show the world that they are an awesome positive force to be reckoned with, wouldn’t want to be associated in any way with this odious man is because Rapinoe hates the U.S., obviously.

Did you know that she had the audacity to kneel during the National Anthem in solidarity with Colin Kaepernick in order to protest the brutality against and oppression of black people in the U.S.? And now that the league won’t let her kneel she refuses to sing the National Anthem! “What an un-American thing to do,” cry people who have never represented America in the Olympics, or won a world championship for this country or done anything else for this country.

One of those people is named Donald Trump. He took to Twitter to vent about Rapinoe.

“Megan should never disrespect our Country, the White House, or our Flag, especially since so much has been done for her & the team,” Trump ranted. “Be proud of the Flag that you wear.”

“Be proud of the Flag” writes the man who faked having bone spurs to get out of serving in the military.

Of course, Rapinoe is proud of the U.S. but she’s not proud of Trump.

“mSpinoe just stated that she is ‘not going to the F-ing White House if we win.’ Other than the NBA,” Trump wrote, “leagues and teams love coming to the White House. By ‘other than the NBA,’ I’m assuming he’s talking about how the Golden State Warriors went to visit President Obama, not Trump, after their 2018 championship win.

America is proud of you all!”

Mm-hmm.

As Twitter user Katy responded, “You gotta be eating cold Wendy’s all by yoself.”

It’s not an honor to meet the president if the president is not an honorable person. It would actually be a punishment to force this team of amazing women to be in the same room with a man who has been accused of sexual assault and rape by so many women that they could make up their own soccer team.

Sue Bird, a WNBA player on the Seattle Storm and Rapinoe’s girlfriend, wrote an amazing piece for The Players’ Tribune titled “So the President F*cking Hates My Girlfriend” in which she describes what it is like “to have the literal President of the literal United States (of literal America) go Full Adolescent Boy on your girlfriend.”

But Bird maintains perspective: “It’s also really important not to forget what this is actually, first and foremost, about, you know? It’s about a world-class athlete, operating at the absolute peak of her powers, on the absolute biggest stage there is. It’s about an athlete f*cking killing it.”

Trump, alas, is also at the peak of his powers, and he is definitely using them for evil. He must be defeated. I think the Democratic field is pretty crowded, but I could get behind a Rapinoe-Bird ticket. Then again, they are kicking ass right where they are.
EQMI Announces 2019 Fall Reception

BY BTL STAFF

Equality Michigan is Michigan’s statewide LGBTQ political advocacy organization that focuses on anti-violence and anti-discrimination work as well as providing support services for those who have been victimized due to their sexual orientation. EQMI will be hosting its annual Fall Reception, this year titled Mission Equality, on Friday, Sept. 13, with keynote speaker Attorney General Dana Nessel.

“We hope you’ll join us for our 2019 Fall Reception Mission Equality,” wrote event organizers. “Featuring an upscale Detroit venue with stunning views of the Riverfront and city skyline, delectable food and drinks, and awards for leaders in equality, this annual event brings together lawmakers, corporate leaders and community leaders to build the relationships that form the foundation of our political progress.”

Tickets start at $175. To find out more about the event as well as its sponsorship opportunities visit equalitymi.org/missionequality.

---

Transcend the Binary Hosts Trans/Gender Diverse Camp

BY BTL STAFF

From July 28 through Aug. 2, campers ages 13 to 17 are invited to a welcoming transgender and gender non-conforming space to camp, do activities and connect with others at Trans/Gender Diverse Camp. The camp is put on by Transcend the Binary – an organization created by and for transgender people dedicated to providing comprehensive health care.

“Create friendships that last a lifetime and build a community in a safe space! Experience a beautiful lakeside while enjoying boating, hiking, movie nights, art and games with new friends,” said event organizers. “Our inclusive camp will also offer resources and help with things such as navigating relationships and self-empowerment.”

The camp counselors present are community members who will also be working as peer advocates who can “offer personalized support.” Any campers who need assistance with funding or transportation are invited to contact organizers during registration by visiting camptalahi.org.

---

MDHHS Launches Statewide Lead Awareness Campaign

BY BTL STAFF

To help educate Michiganders about the sources of lead in and around their homes and how to protect their health, the Michigan Department of Health and Human Services has launched a new statewide awareness campaign.

The goal of the campaign is to educate families about the possible sources of lead – including paint, dust, water and soil – and how to mitigate, reduce or eliminate those exposures. The campaign includes advertising on the web, social media and Pandora. A new website – Michigan.gov/MILeadSafe - has been developed to provide a one-stop-shop on lead, lead hazards and mitigation steps. It also has links to important community resources and information for families.

“Lead can be found in dust, soil, paint in older homes, in lead containing pipes and faucets,” said Dr. Joneigh Khaldun, MDHHS chief medical executive and chief deputy director for health. “We want no child in Michigan to be exposed to lead, and this educational campaign is an important part of that effort.”

The campaign kicks off following an announcement yesterday by Gov. Gretchen Whitmer, the Department of Environment, Great Lakes, and Energy and MDHHS about the state’s new Lead and Copper Rule and available resources.

Michigan adopted one of the nation’s toughest lead rules for drinking water in 2018 that requires removal of lead service lines and lowers the action level over which public water supplies must take steps to reduce the corrosiveness of the water they supply. Additionally, the rule imposes more stringent drinking water sampling requirements designed to provide municipalities with more accurate readings of potential lead exposure in communities.

For children and pregnant women, lead exposure is especially dangerous because it can impact a child’s developing brain. It can also contribute to miscarriages and preterm birth.

Lead can be found in soil, chipping and peeling paint, drinking water if supplied by lead pipes, certain home remedies and is used in some hobbies and occupations. There is no safe level of lead in the blood.

Visit Michigan.gov/MILeadSafe.
Exciting Announcement!
Williams Auto World has Expanded &
Now Includes Williams Hyundai

2845 East Saginaw St., Lansing, MI  48912
517-484-1341 | www.williamssautoworld.com

---

Never Stop Learning.
For CADL members, lifelong learning resources are a click away. It’s all free at cadl.org/learn.

---

Educate.
Scholarships through the LCC Foundation provide opportunities that grow talent and build skills that ELEVATE our community. DONATE today.

Donate. Educate. Elevate
lcc.edu/elevate

---

David Harris, Ph.D.
Fully Licensed Psychologist

Individual
Couples
Family Therapy

LANSINGPSYCH.NET
adjacent to msu campus

---

RTI Cool Cities Lansing
YOUR NEIGHBORHOOD • YOUR MARKET
Pinpoint your ad dollars where they will do the most good . . .
Advertise in the next Cool Cities
TO PLACE AN AD CALL 734.293.7200

---

Capital Area District Libraries
Not a member yet?
Join today at cadl.org/card

---

www.PrideSource.com
Mehlman Leads GOP Brief Urging Supreme Court to Rule for LGBT Protections

BY CHRIS JOHNSON

Ken Mehlman, the former George W. Bush operative and Republican National Committee chair who came out as gay in 2010, is leading LGBT-supportive Republicans in urging conservative justices on the U.S. Supreme Court to rule in favor of LGBT workplace protections under current law.

In a 24-page legal brief first reported by Jeremy Peters of the New York Times, the Republicans take a conservative approach in asserting Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, which bars sex discrimination in the workforce, also applies to cases anti-LGBT discrimination.

“When Title VII was enacted, Congress and the American public would not have expected it to protect sexual orientation and transgender status because those aspects of identity were not the subjects of significant political debate at the time,” the brief says. “Perhaps so, but it is not relevant. As this Court has repeatedly recognized, in Title VII cases as well as cases in other areas of the law, statutes often apply more broadly than their drafters anticipated, and extrinsic evidence of statutory ‘intent’ is irrelevant when the statute’s words are clear.”

The brief invokes the Supreme Court ruling in the 1998 case of Oncale v. Sundowner Offshore Services, which involved a male worker alleging a same-sex sexual harassment on the job. The decision, written by the late conservative U.S. Associate Justice Antonin Scalia, held the prohibition on sex discrimination under Title VII should be considered broadly.

Also invoked in the brief is the 1986 decision in Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson, which for the first time held sexual harassment is an illegal form of sex discrimination.

In the cases on review, the ultimate question is both simple and no different from the questions in Meritor, Oncale, or any other case applying the plain language of Title VII in the context of sex discrimination: Would the plaintiffs below have been treated differently by their employers were they of a different sex?” the brief says. “The answer, in each case, is ‘yes.’”

Signers of the brief in addition to Mehlman include Fred Karger, a gay 2012 Republican presidential candidate; Meg Whitman, Republican nominee for California governor in 2008; and gay former Republican congressional candidate Richard Tisei.

It’s not the first time Mehlman has led LGBT-supportive Republicans in calling on conservative justices to rule in favor of LGBT rights. The former RNC chair also led briefs urging the Supreme Court to strike down California’s Proposition 8 and bans on same-sex marriage throughout the country in 2015.

After taking a lead role in the Bush administration, which sought to ban same-sex marriage nationwide with a Federal Marriage Amendment, Mehlman had turn around, coming out as a gay and working to advance same-sex marriage.

Although former members of Congress, including Rep. Ileana Ros-Lehtinen of Florida and former Sen. Alan Simpson of Wyoming signed the brief, a conspicuous absence are any Republicans currently serving in the Congress. Sen. Susan Collins (R-Maine) didn’t sign the brief, nor did any of the eight House Republicans who voted in favor of the Equality Act in May to ban anti-LGBT discrimination.

Meanwhile, a group of 151 congressional Democrats — 113 House members and 38 senators — have signed a legal brief insisting Title VII “makes clear” it affords LGBT protections.

The lead author of the brief is Roy Englert, a D.C.-based appellate lawyer at the Robbins, Russell, Englert, Orseck, Untereiner and Sauber.

The brief is made public as the Justice Department is expected to issue a filing this week representing the Trump administration’s position on whether Title VII covers LGBT workers. The Trump administration has previously held the view LGBT people aren’t protected under current law.

Englert told the Blade no attempt was made to get Trump’s signature of the Mehlman brief, but didn’t respond to follow-up email on why no current congressional Republicans signed.

Victory Fund Endorses Obama-Era Ambassador for US Senate

BY CHRIS JOHNSON

The LGBTQ Victory Fund, which has the exclusive purpose of backing LGBT candidates running for political office, has thrown its support behind a former U.S. ambassador who served during the Obama administration and is running to become the first openly gay man elected to the U.S. Senate.

Annise Parker, CEO of the Victory Fund, announced the endorsement of Baer Monday in a statement that recalled Jared Polis’s 2018 victory in Colorado as the first openly gay man elected governor.

“Coloradans led the country by electing America’s first openly gay governor in 2018 – and in 2020 they will make history again in sending the first out gay man to the U.S. Senate,” Parker said.

Baer is seeking the Democratic nomination to run for Senate in a field of candidates that includes former State Sen. Michael Johnston, former Navy sailor and Halliburton worker Keith Pottatz, former State Rep. Andrew Romanoff and former congressional candidate Stephany Spaulding.

The Democratic primary in Colorado is June 30, 2020. If Baer succeeds in obtaining the Democratic nomination, he’ll face off against Sen. Cory Gardner (R-Colo.), who considered one of the most vulnerable Republicans in 2020.

The Victory Fund endorsement comes shortly after Baer reported a second-quarter fundraising haul of $1.35 million, including $1.1 million in total contributions. According to the Victory Fund, that’s the largest ever initial fundraising report for an openly LGBT congressional candidate not already in Congress.

Parker invoked both Baer’s fundraising numbers and Gardner, who has refused to support the Equality Act, in her statement announcing the Baer nomination.

“Never before has an openly LGBTQ Congressional candidate reported such strong initial fundraising numbers without the benefit of congressional incumbency – an important indicator, given LGBTQ candidates for high-level office are often underestimated early in their campaigns,” Parker said. “But Dan’s authentic and values-driven approach to politics is resonating with voters, and there is no better candidate to take on anti-LGBTQ incumbent Cory Gardner than a person so deeply affected by the discriminatory positions Gardner promotes.”

One of seven openly gay ambassadors in the Obama administration, Baer as U.S. ambassador to the Organization for Security & Cooperation in Europe was charged with deescalating tensions in Europe during the Ukraine crisis in 2014.

Previously, Baer served as deputy assistant secretary for the Bureau of Democracy, Human Rights & Labor under Hillary Clinton when she was secretary of state. Baer worked on international LGBT issues, including the integration of LGBT human rights abuses in the State Department’s annual human rights report.

In addition to being the first openly gay man elected to the Senate, Baer would be the third openly LGBT person to serve in the U.S. Senate. The first was Sen. Tammy Baldwin (D-Wis.), the first out lesbian elected to the chamber, and the second was Kyrsten Sinema (D-Ariz.), the first out bisexual person in the Senate.

News of the Victory Fund’s endorsement of Baer comes shortly after the organization endorsed South Bend Mayor Pete Buttigieg in his bid for the Democratic nomination to become president.

Like Baer, Buttigieg announced good fundraising numbers for the second quarter, reporting a haul of nearly $25 million. No other Democratic presidential candidate thus far has reported similar numbers.

RON T. WILLIAMSON DDS
Dedicated to make our community brighter
One Smile At A Time
248-399-4455

Uninsured?
No Problem.
Significant Savings
with our Smile Club

Nitrous Oxide (relaxing air)
Proud participants in the Ryan White Program
No charges for emergency examinations and consultations.

Care Credit
Visa
Maestro
1964 W. 11 Mile Road, Suite 4,
Berkley, MI 48072
www.rontwilliamsondds.com
Find us on facebook

Marrying the love of your life shouldn’t leave you stressing about having two mortgages.

RENT IT OUT!

GROSSE POINTE APARTMENTS & Property Management

Anna Bartolotta, Owner, Broker
313-505-0456
GrossePointeApartments.com
17728 Mack Ave.
Grosse Pointe, MI 48230

A woman owned and operated business since 2006.

Miner’s Den
JEWELERS
“FOREVER STARTS HERE”

WWW.MINERSDEN.COM
(248)-585-6950
3417 ROCHESTER RD.
ROYAL OAK, MI

VISIT US AT
8 Ways to Make Your Wedding Green

A bevy of easy eco-friendly options to make your wedding stylish and environmentally conscious

BY ANNA SACHSE

Whether your goal is a few simple substitutions or a more advanced overhaul, here are eight ways to go green on your big day.

Waste less paper

Simple – Use tree-free or recycled paper for everything from invites to programs to seating cards, says Danielle Venokur, founder and principle planner for dvGreen, a sustainable event design company in New York.

Advanced – “Revisit traditions with a modern eye to avoid paper altogether wherever it’s appropriate for your particular event,” Venokur said. This can mean anything from providing a single seating chart instead of multiple cards, to using email invites for events like the bachelor/ette parties, bridal showers or a casual rehearsal dinner.

Leave a smaller carbon footprint

Simple – “Choose a location that is central to the majority of your guests, so that less people have to fly to your event,” said Kate L. Harrison, author of “The Green Bride Guide: How to Plan an Earth-Friendly Wedding on Any Budget” (Sourcebooks, 2008), and founder/CEO of GreenBrideGuide.com. In addition, try to select a venue that is easily accessible by public transportation and works for both the ceremony and reception.

Advanced – Purchase carbon offsets for travel to your wedding, the big day itself and your honeymoon. Use a Carbon Calculator (find one on GreenBrideGuide.com) to determine your event’s footprint and buy equivalent offsets from Brighter Planet. “We also offer eco-friendly gift registries with free carbon-neutral shipping,” Harrison said.

Decorate sustainably

Simple – “Rentals, in general, are a great way to be more environmentally conscious because you’re reusing,” Harrison said. Up the ante by renting linen from companies that use “green” dry cleaning and offer products made of eco-friendly materials, such as hemp silk.

Advanced – Capitalize on the season or a unique location to minimize extra décor, suggests Harrison. For example, a summer wedding that takes place in a garden will reduce the need for additional cut flowers, while a soiree held in a historic mansion can forgo extra electric lighting in favor of romantic candles or lanterns.

Use local, in-season florals

Simple – Venokur suggests only springing for in-season flowers that are grown locally. Also, consider blossoms that have a big impact with less quantity.

Advanced – “Think about the vessel, too,” Venokur said. Pass on products from China in favor of locally-made pottery or recycled glass. Or consider quirky non-floral centerpieces, like stacks of books and candles or buckets of fresh fruit that can double as a favor.
Alexander Zachary
Realtor

313-502-2284 cell
248-626-2100 office
azachary@kw.com
https://alexander.kwrealty.com

Keller Williams West Bloomfield
30500 Northwestern Hwy., Suite 300
Farmington Hills, MI 48334

All You Need is Love - Let Me Help You Find the Home of Your Dreams

Lynn L. Stange
Realtor Associate

70 West Long Lake Rd., Troy MI 48098
248.561.6967 | LLStange@aol.com

Full Service Residential Real Estate
Local Neighborhood Specialist Representing Buyers & Sellers

Say Yes!
at
B. Ella

P. Ella Bridal

570 S. Main St., Plymouth Mi 48170
734-459-0000
www.instagram.com/b_ella_bridal
17th Annual Orchard Lake Fine Art Show Features Gay Artist Don Tran

BY EVE KUCHARSKI

Whether it's an embracing couple, a seaside view or a crane mid-flight, seeing any of Don Tran’s textile pieces from afar, it's hard to imagine the hand-embroidered silk isn't the work of brush strokes. Step closer, and only then will the thousands of individually placed silk strands show the meticulous nature of Tran's work — especially on the pieces as tall as 50 inches. And as captivating as his art can be, Tran is just one of 150 selected artists set to be featured at the 17th Annual Orchard Lake Fine Art Show held July 27 through 28.

Patty Narozny is the executive director of the juried show and the owner and operator of Hot Works, a fine art and fine craft show organization, which puts on the Orchard Lake event. She said that this show provides a great opportunity for artists of a variety of mediums, both in and out of Michigan, to not only showcase their work but get recognized for excellence in their fields.

"Every year is unique with the Orchard Lake Fine Art Show because we have a national outstanding reputation for high-quality juried fine arts and fine craft shows," Narozny said, adding that she attends each Hot Works show personally to meet all participants and see all submitted works. "We have an outside group of professionals and artists and owners of art organizations and the work is juried in based on originality, technique execution and booth appearance."

Those judges will award $2,500 in prize money as well as other awards of recognition to the artists whose work stands out the most. "There are 18 professional artists awards: one $1,000; two awards of merit, $500; five awards of excellence, $100 each; and 10 non-monetary awards of distinction to recognize additional great artists who are in the show," Narozny said, including that the show provides a youth art competition as well.

She said that along with general recognition in Michigan, the show offers a national pull that draws in many artists from across and out of state to showcase their work. Tran, who is based out of St. Louis, is the "perfect example" of someone pulled to Michigan for that very reason, Narozny said. But he stands out in another way, too, as an openly gay man who is carrying on a traditional Vietnamese embroidery style that has been passed down for generations among his family. Ahead of the Orchard Lake Fine Art Show BTL caught up with him to learn more about his work, his inspiration and his experience making his art.

About the Artist

Born in Vietnam, Tran comes from a long line of silk embroiderers and learned his skill at 12 years old. Now 49, Tran said that he didn't always want to be an artist and that he even took a break to earn a master’s degree in human resources in 2004. But even while he was working at a well-paid corporate job, something was nagging at him to return to the creative process.

So, eight years in, he quit and become an artist full time. And now, to even discerning eyes, it might be apt to call him a master of his craft as he produces works every day. Larger or more complicated pieces, however, may take him months.

"The smaller pieces I create in a couple of days. If I say hourly, I would say 10 to 12 hours [per piece]," Tran said. "[In a year] I have two to four big pieces. This year, I just have [created] one design for 2019 so far, [it took me] eight months, 'Travelling Merchant in Cairo.'"

That piece is a tribute to the original done by Jean Leon Gerome in the 19th century and measures 32 inches by 27 inches. Along with traditional Vietnamese imagery, Tran said he's frequently inspired by classical painted works and sets about embroidering them in his own style.

"That is westernized a little bit so that I can fit my customers’ desires in America," he said, noting that though he mostly sticks to tradition he sometimes tries something new.

"I designed my own skills and my own concepts about how I look at art and how I create that is based on what I like about nature and what my customers want from me. And so, there are two aspects there: traditional and following the desires of the customer," Tran said. "If you order me to do whatever, like your own face or [the] feet of your baby, [I can do] what design, what color you want — anything. Abstract or non-abstract I can do that."

Yet despite his proven ability to embroidery practically any design, Tran said that sometimes he still finds himself butting up against a stigma surrounding his sexuality and the fact that embroidery is still by some considered to be "women's work."

"People in general, deep inside, they still think that this kind of work is for females, not for men. So, when they are at the booth they just assume that the artist would be a female and sometimes they’re surprised. If they are professional or discreet they won’t say anything, but sometimes people say, 'Oh, you're a man.' I used to take it personal because it happened so much but I don't anymore. [When they say,] 'I haven't seen a man do that,' I tell them, 'Well, now you've seen and opened your mind,'" he said with a laugh.

It’s in part that positive attitude that has allowed Tran to be recognized across the country as one of the foremost artists in his craft. In fact, he said he enjoys sharing his work in places like the upcoming Orchard Lake Fine Art Show because it helps to highlight that despite anyone's preconceived notions, artistry shines through.

"When I’m creating the work [I don’t put] my gender or sexual orientation into the work because art is art, and it doesn’t distinguish between race or age or whatever," he said. "There's no limits."

Find out more about the upcoming Orchard Lake Fine Art Show online at hotworks.org.
We are an Honest & Friendly Family Owned Business - Fair Prices Always!

NEW ENTRY DOORS • MANY STYLES • GARAGE DOORS & OPENERS TOO!

SERVING WAYNE, OAKLAND, MACOMB & WASHTENAW COUNTIES

- Residential Experts
- We Sell New Doors
- Cable & Roller Replacement
- Openers Repaired & Installed
- All Types Of Garage Door & Opener Repairs
- Spring Replacement

We Fix Broken Springs
✓ Check Our Prices On Broken Spring Replacement

FAST 24 Hour Emergency Service

Town & Country Door LLC
Over 450 Five Star Reviews

If We Can't Fix It... Our Service Call Is Free

All Work Warranted In Writing
248-600-4683
WWW.TOWNANDCOUNTRYDOOR.NET

-------

The Ultimate LGBT Wedding & Anniversary Expo

Save The Date
Sunday, October 13
Noon - 4 p.m.
The Henry • Dearborn, Michigan

Vendor Info Call 734-293-7200 x 101
www.MiLGBTWedding.com

Presented by
Between The Lines

www.PrideSource.com
If you’re not a Robyn fan, you’re not gay. Or so they say. I told Robyn about this POV from the gay Twitter collective when I called her direct on Skype recently – it was remarkably human of the pop goddess to answer, with no publicist listening in – and with a titter she said: “Well, that particular, uh, viewpoint is maybe a little extreme, in my mind.”

In non-Robyn minds, of course, that hyperbolic reach illustrates the electro dance queen’s embedded place in queer culture, explicable underneath strobe lights inside a queer club where her shimmering dance-pop anthems register as euphoric elation and communal catharsis.

Same goes for a Robyn concert, perhaps the closest thing to a gay nightclub that’s not an actual gay nightclub.

Or on a New York City subway platform after a Robyn concert, which happened in March when a passel of devotees convened while waiting for the E train, exuberantly belting out “Dancing On My Own,” a diverse chorus of voices joined together by shared human emotions.

We, the misfits, move with her and are moved by her in the quiet solitude of our private sanctuaries (the bedroom) too, the lights down low, hearts broken but not beyond healing – Robyn’s music at its emotional, queer-relatable core.

“Ever Again” is the latest video release from “Honey,” her first solo full-length in eight years, and the album’s low-key house and lounge vibes wittingly challenge those who thought they knew what a Robyn song should sound like (she gets off on turning her image and sound on their heads, she tells me). In the raw, evocative clip, the 40-year-old pop icon is dressed in a sheer, nipple-baring silk blouse and latex jumpsuit, both fashioned by Nicolas Ghesquière for Louis Vuitton; she sexes a mic stand, cutting loose in a sandy desert where Greek statues tower over the Swedish fembot. When she raises the stand with profound ease after humping it on the ground, whipping it around and around through the air with propellant force, we are reminded of Robyn’s status as a singular supernova still staking out her own slice of solitary sky in a galaxy of flashy pop stars.

You look at her, writhing, gyrating, moving in tandem with only herself as her guide, like a leader among us, and think: of course she is among the Gods. A true pop music heroine. In the decade since “Body Talk,” when the late-’90s artist reemerged a cult force in the aughts, the gay icon has culled a coalition of underground outsiders and outcasts by cutting through pop-culture excess with the rarest of pop-star features: her desire to be human first, pop artist second.

She tells me she doesn't see herself like we see her – this, after I tell her how lucky I feel to be Skyping her (it's Robyn! On her own!), and how her music has served as a heartening salve for many, including myself. Our Robyn is not Robyn’s Robyn, however, and so her demure response – “OK, great. I’m happy I can do that for you,” she said, in a voice that intoned a steady softness that made me wonder what Robyn sounds like when she’s shouting – can be read as reluctantly appreciative (later, she tells me why).

The rest of my Skype conversation with Robyn was spent talking about why she thinks it’s important artists understand the queer references they use in their work, the precise reason she’s proud “Dancing On My Own” became a gay anthem, and how her current post-tomboy femininity is, for her, “almost like dragging.”

Has your relationship with the LGBTQ community always been such a natural fit?

Yeah, I’m sure. Whatever people connect to in my music, if it’s there for them, then that is a natural connection. You know what I think? I wouldn’t say that all LGBT and queer people are the same, so for me it’s maybe a little awkward to assume that all people that are LGBTQ have the same views of what I do, but I can recognize myself in the LGBTQ community in the sense that I think they are people who question what being a human being is about because it has been naturally incorporated in being different or feeling different, or maybe not being conventional or living in a conventional way. I think questioning yourself or questioning the context you’re in comes natural to this community, and for me that’s something that I feel connected to or that I feel that I can understand. Maybe that’s why there seems to be this strong, kind of pure bond between me and that part of my fan group.

How do you explain the relationship between the LGBTQ community and, more specifically, your music?

There’s a tradition with the gay community gravitating to music that is melodic and melancholy, maybe in the same (song). You can hear it in ABBA, you can hear it in the tradition of British gay bands and gay artists that have always championed this way of singing about emotions, whether it's like Erasure, or even Queen. There’s a tradition there within gay music culture that I always felt was something that I connected to.

You grew up with parents who owned a theater company. Was that your first exposure to the LGBTQ community?

Some of my parents’ friends were gay and some of them were people I liked, but I don’t know if I can say that I had an understanding of the gay community through my parents.

You’ve said that making your own space as a pop artist versus trend-grabbing has been at least somewhat a byproduct of being inspired by the queer community also having to create its own space. When did you first experience the queer community in that way?

My first experience of club culture was in New York in a club called Body & Soul, which was at this place called the Shelter in New York. I don’t know if you could say it was a pure gay club because it was very mixed, but it was definitely a club that was authentic in the sense that it was really connected to the foundations of house music in New York, which was a pure gay culture. But I wouldn’t say it was a part of gay culture that represents all gay people either.

Also, I think it’s maybe important to just define “gay” or “LGBTQ” because there’s so many different parts of it now, which is an amazing thing. You know, it’s really beautiful how diverse it’s been and become and how broad it is now; it’s part of the commercial pop culture in the world. But the part that I was brought into as a teenager was maybe something that I don’t think you can say was a commercial part of the gay community but something that grew out of a gay community that was very underground and not so accepted.

When it comes to the commercialization of queerness in pop music, what are you seeing? Are more artists diving into queer culture in a way that wasn’t happening when you launched your music career in the ’90s?

For me I don’t think I am a protector of queer – well, maybe queer, but not gay values. I’m not the one who sets the agenda for how people should relate to gay culture; I think that’s something that gay people have to do and kind of guard themselves. I don’t feel like I have that right. But I was always inspired by club music, and the club culture is something that gay people crave. It wouldn’t exist if there wasn’t the gay community that started that whole movement in America in the ’70s. And I think because of that, I have a responsibility to be aware of what the references are that I’m drawn to. But it’s also queer culture in the sense that there’s lots of artists who don’t define themselves as gay artists but who are still making queer music, whether it’s Kate Bush or Prince.

Is queerness in pop music political?

I think there’s a political aspect to talking about gay communities – and there’s also another aspect, which is just about the queer expression and what that means. But sometimes they overlap and sometimes it's really important to be political. I think it's always important to be aware of, whether it's gay culture or black culture or any minority, what it is that you are representing and where you draw your inspiration from. But then there's also another kind of space, which is held by a queer expression and which, I think, goes beyond your sexual orientation.

It might be a way of just expressing yourself that is not part of the norm, so there's lots of different nuances in that.

You've said you get shy when fans express their love for you because you don't know if things are gonna get weird. What's the weirdest encounter you've had with a fan?

I don't remember. I don't keep track of those things, but I guess for me it's just maybe sometimes I don't feel that I - maybe I'm not just always comfortable with the attention, but that doesn't mean I'm not, like, happy that people enjoy my music. I'm just always really flattered when people come up to me and tell me what they feel. That's always a nice day, especially when people are nice. But I don't know. It's hard to give an example of weird fans.

What about the attention makes you uncomfortable?

I guess maybe I'm just a little bit uncomfortable with the idea of fame. I don't think it has to do, maybe, with fans; I just think sometimes I'm like a sensitive person (laughs), so I don't always feel like I recognize myself in the image that people have of me. I might have a different day, or I might be in a different kind of mood, or whatever; I just get a little awkward. But it's nothing too traumatic.

Aside from “Dancing On My Own,” are there other songs of yours that have been interpreted, or even kind of claimed, by LGBTQ culture in ways you hadn't expected they would be?

I think with songs like that you never know what's gonna happen to them. It's almost like when you release a song, it's not yours anymore - it's up to the people who listen to it to decide what it means for them. And that's what I love about making music, or even performing live: that it's a conversation between me and the people who are listening. So I don't, maybe other people do, know what's gonna happen with a song.

With “Dancing On My Own,” it was definitely like that - I had no idea it was going to take on these several different lives, being a part of “Girls,” the TV series, and then becoming what you're saying: a song that meant a lot to the gay community, and in lots of different countries. That's one of the biggest compliments you can get as an artist, because the gay community chooses their champions in a very special way.

With ‘Dancing On My Own’ … I had no idea it was going to take on these several different lives, being a part of “Girls,” the TV series, and then becoming what you're saying: a song that meant a lot to the gay community, and in lots of different countries. That's one of the biggest compliments you can get as an artist, because the gay community chooses their champions in a very special way.

Do you still see it that way?

I do, yeah. I still play it live sometimes. It was a part of the setlist the last time I toured, so I'm not against it in any way.

You took an eight-year break before “Honey” was released last year. Will we have to wait as long for the next album?

Oh, I don't know if it will be another eight years – that would feel strange. There will be an album sooner or later, but I don't know when. I'm still touring, so I haven't been spending any time in the studio since the end of last year. I hope to have music finished. I don't know when I'll have music finished.

You once said you identify with the queer community when it comes to subverting gender expectations, and I noticed your gender presentation is currently softer and more feminine. Did you get sick of having to introduce yourself as, “Hi, I'm Robyn and I'm a girl?”

I haven't introduced myself that way in a very long time, but I think when I grew up, being androgynous was also a way of protecting myself and not being as vulnerable as a woman or as a girl. I was maybe at a stage when I made this album where I felt it was time to let that go, even a bit. Not saying at all that androgyny is something you can't be vulnerable in, because I really think it's a lot of different things for a lot of different people. And I don't think that being androgynous is, as much as it was maybe when I was growing up, a protection, because everything with gender is kind of being re-examined at the moment. So maybe, for me, it was more drag going into a feminine role than it was being androgynous.

You felt more comfortable as a tomboy.

Exactly. So being more feminine is almost like dragging for me (laughs) – or exploring something in myself that maybe I wasn't as easy with.

Do you find power in how you choose to present gender?

For me, I think the power of it is being able to play with it and not having to decide what it is. And that it is just like everything else: Whether you have short hair or long hair or if you're shy or extroverted, these things change over time, and I think what's interesting is how you approach it from what your norm is, or how you're feeling, what is challenging to you – and maybe what's challenging to the people who think they know who you are.

As editor of Q Syndicate, the international LGBTQ wire service, Chris Azzopardi has interviewed a multitude of superstars, including Cher, Meryl Streep, Mariah Carey and Beyoncé. His work has also appeared in Q, Vanity Fair and Billboard. Reach him via Twitter @chrisazzopardi.
GET PAID TO TEST DRIVE
MCC Detroit!

We want to know what YOU think about our church - and we’re willing to pay you for it.

As a FIRST-TIME visitor, we are asking you to attend our Sunday worship between June 23rd and July 28th, 2019 and complete a survey about your experience. As a Thank You, you will receive a $20 gift card to Starbucks!*

How to get your $20 Starbucks gift card:
1. Sign up at www.mccdetroit.org
2. Attend a worship service between June 23rd & July 28th
3. Complete our online survey by July 31st
4. Receive your $20 Starbucks gift card!

*You must complete all three steps by July 31st to receive a gift card. Cards available while supplies last

We’ll see you in church!

A diverse, inclusive Christian church serving the LGBTQ and ally community since 1972.

Michigan Memorial
Funeral Home • Park • Crematory
Family Owned & Operated
www.MMemorial.com

AWBS
ALL WELL-BEING SERVICES

BRINGING WELLNESS TO LIFE

AWBS offers a variety of services to allow members to function at their greatest potential by using trained professionals and best practices.

AWBS SERVICES: Mental Health Services, Substance Use Prevention & Treatment, Assertive Community Treatment, HIV/Hepatitis Prevention & Testing, Primary Care & Dental Services, Health Workshops and Intellectual Developmental Disabilities Services (Skill Building, Family Support and more).

FOR MORE INFORMATION OR APPOINTMENT CALL (313)924-7860 | www.awbs.org

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS.
The LGBTQ+ Community faces many unique challenges, and end-of-life services are no different.

Although your partner may be aware of your wishes, they may not be legally entitled to advocate for you.

Join Michigan Memorial for an opportunity to hear from (and ask questions of) our family service representative and attorney regarding the importance of pre-planning and the simple, yet critical step you can take to protect your rights today. Light food and refreshments will be provided.

Where: July 11, 2019 from 6:30pm - 8:00pm
Where: Affirmations - 290 W. 9 Mile Rd, Ferndale, MI 48220

Speakers: Family Service Representative Jennifer Osfield, LLMSW and Attorney Rebecca Braun, Esq.

RSVP: The event is free, however space is limited, so reservations are requested.

Please call 248-259-5256 to reserve your spot today.

HODGES SUBARU
Metro Detroit’s “Subaru Only Dealer”

21205 Woodward Ave • Ferndale • MI • 48220
248.547.8800 • www.hodgessubaru.com

HOURS: TUES, WED, & FRIDAY SALES - 9 AM - 6 PM Service - 7:30 AM - 6 PM
MONDAY & THURS SALES - 9 AM - 8 PM, Service - 7:30 AM - 8 PM
SATURDAY SALES - 10 AM - 2 PM, Service - 10 AM - 2 PM.

EXCELLENT SERVICE • OUTSTANDING SELECTION • FANTASTIC PRICES....
Back to the City

Out Actor Murray Bartlett on Playing Mouse in ‘Tales of the City’

By Chris Azzopardi

As Michael “Mouse” Tolliver, “Looking” alum Murray Bartlett is the third actor to walk the queer utopian enclave at 28 Barbary Lane in Armistead Maupin’s book-based “Tales of the City.”

The role was originated by actor Marcus D’Amico, who first starred as Mouse, the gay confidante of adorably fizzy San Francisco-via-Ohio transplant Mary Ann Singleton (Laura Linney), in the series’ debut on PBS in 1994. Paul Hopkins took over the part for “More Tales of the City,” in 1998, and again in “Further Tales of the City,” in 2001. Now, Bartlett, 48, portrays the “Tales” mainstay in Netflix’s new revival of the perennial saga.

The openly gay Aussie actor recently talked about Mouse in modern times and acting alongside characters he’s long cherished.

Having shot two LGBTQ-themed shows in San Francisco, how would you compare those experiences?

We shot some stuff in San Francisco for “Tales of the City,” but (unlike “Looking”) we weren’t there most of the time. But the show has the spirit of San Francisco, so it was interesting; there’s a real spirit to San Francisco that I connected to in the ’90s. When I first went there, I really loved it, and on my first trip to San Francisco I watched the first season of “Tales of the City,” and so my impressions of San Francisco are completely sort of inextricable from “Tales of the City” (laughs) and I projected “Tales of the City” onto San Francisco.

Was “Tales” on your mind while shooting HBO’s “Looking,” then?

Weirdly there was that thread for me working on “Looking” in San Francisco. We arrived to shoot the pilot of “Looking” in San Francisco on the night of my birthday and I rented this old stable house, which sounds kind of glamorous – it wasn’t (laughs). But it was beautiful and it had a garden and we watched “Tales of the City,” and then Armistead sort of became our godfather. We met up with him a couple of times and he was so lovely and generous with us. Even though I’m playing two gay men who live in San Francisco, there is quite significant differences in the characters, but the worlds of those shows are really kind of intertwined because San Francisco is so sort of bound to “Tales of the City” in a lot of ways for me.

What did the original “Tales of the City” mean to you?

Particularly in the ’90s there were very few queer characters in film and TV and a lot of them were tragic figures, so it was lovely to have these characters. I mean, they were tortured in some ways, but they were generally this wonderful family of people. It was great to have that kind of identification with real characters that weren’t, like, about to die or going through some crazy stuff that we got used to with queer characters.

The show’s approach to the cross-generational divide is something I appreciate, particularly during that tense dinner debate where Ben calls out a gay man for using the word “tranny” and, in turn, he’s chastised for his young post-AIDS gay privilege. What about that scene stuck you?

It’s such a beautifully written episode. We had such an amazing team on the show and Andy (Parker), our writer for that episode, was just phenomenal. The thing that struck me about it is that it throws up both perspectives of a younger and an older generation and it doesn’t allow you to take sides. You kind of agree and disagree with both, but they both have a point and I love that. It does a beautiful job of just showing the complexity of that sort of collision of those two perspectives, but it doesn’t say this one is right or this one is wrong. It just shows the value of both.

To be a part of a show that once left a great impression on you, what was that experience like? What went through your head when you stepped on set and there’s Olympia Dukakis as Anna Madrigal and there’s Laura Linney as Mary Ann?

It was completely surreal and I felt that the moment I knew I had the job. It was very dreamlike, partly because I connected so strongly to the show and it and the books mean so much to me personally and I was involved in “Looking,” which was very sort of interconnected because of “Tales” for me. Also amazing because I love those women as actors in pretty much everything that they’ve done, but I first came to them – well, I think I’d seen Olympia in “Moonstruck” before “Tales of the City,” but I hadn’t seen Laura before “Tales of the City” and so I strongly associate them with those characters.

So I was nervous in my first few scenes with Laura, even though she was just very gracious and friendly. But then once we started the scene, I’m talking to Mary Ann! It’s weird! Sort of no kind of acting required in a way (laughs) because she is this character for me. So it was very surreal and just a completely joyful experience. And Olympia, everything that she says just feels like she’s this sage woman reaching down from the heavens giving you this pearl of wisdom. I just wanna cry every time she says something. So it was just an absolutely beautiful experience.

Was there more pressure on you knowing that Mouse had already been played by two other actors?

I didn’t feel that. I don’t know why I didn’t feel that, but I think maybe because so much time has gone by in between and so much has happened to Mouse since we last saw him in the TV shows. Decades have gone by, and he’s gone through so much that I felt like he’s got the essence of Mouse but he’s almost a new character, as you kind of are after a couple of decades, particularly going through everything that he went through. He’s still got that buoyancy and that boyish, man-child vibe, which I love. But he’s gone through the depths, facing mortality, seen a lot of death. He’s been through some deep shit. Really transformative stuff. So I felt like I could really approach it fresh. I didn’t really think about it that much, to be honest.

You had a bit part alongside Sarah Jessica Parker in “Sex and the City” as her gay friend

See Back to the City, continued on p. 30
July 18 - 21, 2019

TheAnnArborArtFair.com
Supporting the Community Since
Before it was Cool.

100% Local Agents. 100% Client Focused.
Trillium Real Estate Helps People
Make Good Decisions.

Sandi & Linda
www.trilliumrealtors.com
323 Braun Ct. Ann Arbor, MI 48104
734-302-3011

734.408.1648
7 S. Washington, Ypsilanti
YPSIMASSAGEMECHANICS.COM

Ann Arbor Advertisers
Abracadabra Jewelry &
Gem Gallery ..................... 1
Anderson, PLLC, Mary K. ...... 2
Ann Arbor City Club...........19
Ann Arbor Civic Theatre......3
Ann Arbor Symphony Orchestra 4
The Ark.......................... 5
/a/e Bar ......................... 6
Brookside Veterinary Hospital*
Bassett & Associates.........*
Common Language .......... 6
Delux Drapery..................*
Dependable Collision Center.*
Esquire Interiors...............*
First Unitarian Church of Ann Arbor.................*
Gail van Langen Ph.d. ......... 9
Greene, LMSW, ACSW,
Marge.......................... 10
HIV/AIDS Resource Center (Harc)..................*
Humane Society of Huron Valley..................*
Iglesia Martell Law..........11
Jim Toy Resource Center.....6
Lewis Jewelers.................12
Lord of Light Lutheran Church*
Merkel Carpet One...........*
Michigan Theater.............12
Necto............................15
People’s Food Coop...........16
PFLAG Ann Arbor..............*
Rock Shoppe...................*
Spectrum Center...............19
Three Chairs Co ...............20
Tios Mexican Cafe............21
Trillium Real Estate......... 6
UMHS Comprehensive
Gender Services Program...*
University Musical Society ....22
* Not shown on map
Ann Arbor Pride Starts Aug. 3

BY EVE KUCHARSKI

Though Pride month may be winding down, Pride season has only just begun with dozens of Pride celebrations scheduled across the state this summer. Ann Arbor Pride is no exception, officially celebrating its 25th anniversary exactly 50 years after the Stonewall Riots. The annual event is hosted by and benefits the Jim Toy Community Center, an organization dedicated to serving Ann Arbor’s LGBTQ community, and will begin on Saturday, Aug. 3. Joe Schock is co-director of the festival, and he said that this year will kick off like usual on Saturday with a party.

“We’re still finalizing those details, [but] on Saturday is really where the festival is,” he said. “[That’s] where we’ll have not only an entertainment stage with local entertainers as well as a national headliner, we’ll also have a beer and wine tent and a kid zone as well. The kid zone will have a face-painter, a bounce house, a drag queen storyline — one of our favorites, we’ve received a really positive response for that in our community. And then, Sunday, we kind of wrap everything up with a community picnic.”

This year’s national headliner is something of a milestone for the festival, too, as she’s a drag queen — something Ann Arbor Pride has never done.

“[Their name is Aja and] they were on ‘RuPaul’s Drag Race,’ but they also are an advocate in the genderqueer movement as well,” Schock said, adding that this year the festival has a dedicated focus on inclusion of all groups within the LGBTQ community.

“Jadein Black is [a local drag queen and] the one who is organizing all of the local talent. One thing that I really like about Jadein’s schedule is she does a really good job of really representing the community in diverse ways,” Schock said. “So, this year we’ll be bringing back yoga in the morning. We also have a variety of drag queens and kings, Killer Flamingos, we have some poetry readings as well and then we also have a queer burlesque group coming in, along with the OutLoud Chorus. So, what has really excited me is that Ann Arbor Pride has always had a really good representation of everybody in the community, not just the stereotypical white male version of pride. We really wanted to make sure that we created an environment that mirrors Ann Arbor’s environment and allows everybody to come in and feel comfortable.”

Part of ensuring that comfortable feeling is ensuring that all can attend the event easily; that’s why Schock said the event is free.

“It’s nice to be able to see sponsors and vendors come in and also support the organizations and the group and help people find their communities hopefully post pride, so that this doesn’t just become a one-time thing where the community gets together and celebrates,” he said. “Hopefully, people can get together and engage in meaningful ways and find their community and their tribe outside of the first weekend of August.”
Oliver. Say you were to get Dom, Mouse and Oliver together for brunch – how do you envision that might go?

(Laughs) I think they’d probably get along. I feel like Oliver is a little more worldly, or likes to think of himself as more worldly, so he might find them a little provincial. I feel like Michael and Dom would get on well, but I feel like they’re of a slightly different generation and I think Dom’s life has been a little more sort of superficial than Mouse’s has. I feel like Mouse has been forced to go really deep and face his demons and death and all that stuff, and I think Dom is starting to do that but he’s still at the beginning of that. I think Dom would probably be slightly intimidated by that aspect of Mouse and Mouse would be like, “Yeah, I see you” (laughs). So I don’t think any of them would be fast friends, but I think they’d get along.

Especially with bottomless mimosas.

Exactly. Loosen things up!

In the new “Tales,” Mary Ann returns to Barbary Lane with an infomercial product she once proudly hawked: Bloodies, which is essentially a hooded Snuggie. Did they let you keep your Bloodie?

(Laughs) We all got Bloodies as a wrap gift!

Are you wearing it right now?

No, I’m not. It’s really funny, but it’s one of those things where you’re like, “Great. What the fuck am I gonna do with this now?” (Laughs) You can have it if you like.

You haven’t worn it, I take it?

I mean, I’ve worn it just kind of, you know, to laugh at it (laughs), but not for real. I still have this amazing kind of Pendleton robe from “Looking” that I wear because it’s so beautiful. I never wear robes but it’s so gorgeous I have to wear it sometimes.

Do you keep in touch with the “Looking” cast?

Yeah! That was a total lovefest, that show. And we became great friends. And we’re still really good friends, all of us. A bunch of us live in New York so we see each other regularly.

You had a famously sexy porn stache on “Looking” and you have a beard on “Tales,” and because it’s not a Murray Bartlett interview without asking about your facial hair: Were there serious discussions about Mouse’s facial hair for this new “Tales”?

(Laughs) I had a little beard when I auditioned, and I’ve got a lot of gray in my beard. I’m not that much younger than Mouse, but I’m a little bit younger, so we wanted him to look his age so it seemed that having it gray was helpful in that. I also think that beards are still a thing – maybe they’re not anymore; I can’t keep up! – (laughs) but you still see a lot of beards around, and it felt like something very kind of his generation. Also I think he has this boyish spirit but he likes to have this manliness to counteract his boyish, sometimes girlish, spirit.

And Mouse is basically a daddy now.

Totally. I think Ben in some ways has it more together, but Mouse does have that breath of experience that does sort of give him a sort of daddy vibe and daddy wisdom, but I think he’s happy for Ben to take the wheel at times.

Read the full interview online at PrideSource.com.
Happenings

Carly Rae Jepsen at the Fillmore
July 13

Canadian singer, songwriter and actress Carly Rae Jepsen shot to fame in 2012 after releasing her single “Call Me Maybe” and since then has consistently released records that have earned her accolades like a Billboard Music Award and Juno Awards and nominations for both MTV Video Music and Emmy Awards. Catch her when she makes her way to The Fillmore in Detroit on Saturday, July 13. Find out more online at thefillmoredetroit.com

Sunday, July 14

LGBT Social Meet Up 6:30 p.m. Lgbt social meet up group is a group for light people who want to meet have light hearted discussions and social activities some activities all is welcomed, we are on going every ongoing Hazel Park Community Center, 620 West Woodward Heights, Hazel Park. 248-632-8274. redbellysenegal90@gmail.com.

Monday, July 15

Rosanne Cash 7 p.m. Rosanne Cash and her band come to the Royal Oak Music Theatre for a tour stop. Royal Oak Music Theatre, 318 W. 4th Street, Royal Oak. 248-399-2980. royaloakmusictheatre.com.

LGBT Game Night 7 p.m. LGBT Game Night is an opportunity for all LGBT people and allies to come play a board game, drink coffee and socialize with people and allies to come play a board game, drink coffee and socialize with

Affirmations Senior Koffee Clatch! Wednesday, July 17

Ann Arbor Art Fair Thursday, July 18

Bash Fest at Trumbullplex

Editor’s Pick

Bash Fest at Trumbullplex

A benefit held for anti-racism and anti-facism, Bash Fest is a festival with an eight-band lineup featuring local acts like Pancho Villa’s Skull, GIRL FIGHT and more. Find out more about the show online at the Trumbullplex Facebook page.
Editor’s Pick

Hotter Than July

The annual Hotter Than July festival held July 23 through July 28 is put on by LGBT Detroit annually to celebrate the local black LGBTQ community. Events include a candlelight vigil, a summit, a mixer, musical acts and more. Find out about the week full of events online at lgbtdetroit.org.

Thursday, July 25
Toastmasters International SpeakOUT! LGBT Meeting 8 p.m. Professional & personal communication skills development. Jim Toy Community Center, 319 Braun Court, Ann Arbor. 734-995-9867. lawrencemcmullan@gmail.com. speakout.toastmastersclubs.org.

Friday, July 26
Hotter Than July 2019 – Annual Summit 9 a.m. Hotter Than July – Detroit Black Gay Pride 2019’s annual day-long conference takes place every year. Marvin Lee Social Justice Center, 20021 Greenfield Road, Detroit. lgbtdetroit.org/hotter-than-july.

Saturday, July 27
Hotter Than July 2019 – Pride Picnic 10 a.m. The pinnacle event of Detroit’s annual celebration is a family reunion that takes place in Palmer Park (at the intersections of West McNichols Road & Woodward Ave) Palmer Park. lgbtdetroit.org/hotter-than-july.

Thursday, August 1
Pride Night at Thunderbowl! 8 p.m. Meet & Greet First Thursday of every month, unlimited bowling, shoe rental, private room, private bar area, drink specials, biliard room, 250 foot video wall. Thunderbowl Arena, 4200 Allen Road, Allen Park. 313-928-4688. thunderbowl.org. thunderbowl.org.

Saturday, August 3
Ann Arbor Pride 2019 This 2-day festival, first in 1995, Ann Arbor Pride(OUTFest) celebrates lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, queer identities, community and allyship. All proceeds go to support the efforts of Jim Toy Community Center. Visit annarbopride.com.

Sunday, August 4
Stand with Trans 2018 Support Groups – Adrian-Lenawee County 6:30 p.m. Free and OPEN to the community. For parents of transgender kids, this group meets the 1st Sunday of each month @ Hilltop Counseling For Trans Youth Support Group information, contact facilitator Socorro Sevilla, MSW, socorro@hilltopcounseling.org Hilltop Counseling, 115 W. Maumee St., Adrian. 313-909-5408.
Picture it: Miami, 1987. A successful television show ends after seven seasons to everyone’s chagrin. Dorothy, Blanche, Rose, and Sophia live on in all of our hearts as we watch reruns of “The Golden Girls” over a mound of cheesecake and a bottle of wine. But what if, through some strange bit of Hollywood magic, they were able to come back for a new season? And what if the first episode of that season included the girls doing Shakespeare’s “The Merry Wives of Windsor”? The gay gasps would be deafening. Good news, Slipstream Theatre Initiative reimagines Shakespeare’s comedy as just that – and invites you to a live filming of Season 8, episode 1: “The Golden Girls do Merry Wives!” now through Aug. 4.

The Merry Wives of Windsor is the story of Mistresses Page and Ford, two women of a certain age with more than a little wit and spunk. Mistress Ford has a terribly jealous husband who is sure he will catch his wife in an act of infidelity and sets out to prove himself right. Meanwhile, Sir John Falstaff, a rascal of a different sort, has devised a way to seduce both women and make some money in the process. A nosy neighbor and a much-sought-after daughter add to the frenzy and the result is madness and shenanigans as only the Bard could create.

Slipstream’s newly titled “The Merry Wives of Miami” features powerhouse Michigan actors Mandy Logsdon (as Betty White as Rose Nylund as Mistress Ford), Jan Cartwright (as Bea Arthur as Dorothy Zbornak as Mistress Page), Luna Alexander (as Rue McClanahan as Blanche Devereaux as Anne Page) and Linda Rabin Hammell (as Estelle Getty as Sophia Petrillo as Mistress Quickly). The rest of the cast includes Patrick O’Lear (as the scandalous buffoon John Falstaff), Ryan Ernst (as the jealous rapscallion Master Ford), Jake Rydell (as the sex-starved French Doctor Caius), Alex “Cookie” Isenberg (as bro-er than thou suitor to Anne Page, Master Slender), Tiaja Sabrie (as the unfazed and incessantly chef-tastic Master Page) and Grace Trivax (as an in-over-her-head Floor Manager who has to take on various roles due to the Child Actors Union being on strike).

This production is directed by Bailey Boudreau with Alanna Elling serving as stage manager. Jackson Abohasira is the technical designer, and Tiaja Sabrie is the costume designer. Photography is by Jan Cartwright and graphic design is by Esbee Creative.

Tickets can be purchased at slipstreamti.com, by emailing Slipstreamti@Slipstreamti.com or calling 313-986-9156.
Review

Fall in Love With ‘Crazy For You’ at The Encore

BY KYM REINSTADLER

Dexter – Everybody who’s wisefully sighed, “They don’t make musicals like they used to,” should do themselves a favor and see Encore Musical Theatre’s production of “Crazy For You.” This recreation of George and Ira Gershwin’s 1930 show “Girl Crazy” is a fun-filled 2 1/2-hour, laugh-a-minute song and dance extravaganza that kicks up so much positive energy that you’ll almost feel like you’re floating out of the theater.

The show has pretty-in-pink showgirls, rootin’ tootin’ cowboys who dance a lot better than they shoot, beautiful costumes, props that morph into dance partners, a field of cornball humor, and laugh-out-loud physical gags.

But the greatest strengths of this show are the music – 18 of the Gershwin brothers’ most treasured songs – and the dancing, which includes some of the most inventive choreography you’ll ever see. (No kidding. In the number “Slap That Bass,” chorus girls become stringed instruments played by cowboys. In the stomping spectacular “I Got Rhythm,” which ends the first act, pickaxes transform into swings for showgirls.)

“Crazy For You” was remade in the tradition of a classic Broadway musical with a large cast of singers, dancers and musicians. It won the Tony Award as Broadway’s best musical in 1992.

The Encore Musical Theatre Company works from a much smaller stage, but the show still play big with director Dan Cooney’s cast of 21 and music director Tyler Driskill’s pint-sized orchestra.

Matthew Brennan stars as Bobby Child, a showbiz wannabe who fate has miscast into a New York City banking family. The play is set during The Great Depression. Bobby’s family’s bank sends him to deadbeat town of Deadrock, Nevada, to foreclose on an old theater that’s been used as post office for the few residents that remain after all the gold was panned out.

Soon after arriving, Bobby – who has a beautiful but bitchy fiancée back in New York – is smitten by the daughter of the theater owner (and the only girl in town), Polly Baker. The high-spirited and big-hearted Polly is wonderfully portrayed by Rachel Hafell, who does justice to two of the production’s best-loved songs, “Someone to Watch Over Me” and “But Not For Me.”

Because Polly knows that the bank is sending Bobby Child to foreclose on the property, Bobby disguises himself as Bela Zangler – the Florenz Ziegfield-like New York impresario whom Polly idolizes – and convinces the townspeople to stage a show modeled after Zangler’s Follies starring chorus-girl friends from New York and the denizens of Deadrock.

Of course, there are a mountain of snags and gags before we know whether Bobby’s magical plan to save the theater and his romance with Polly will work.

Brennan dazzles as Bobby and Zangler. His dancing, singing and comedic timing are nothing short of superb. He delivers the Gershwin greats “They Can’t Take That Away From Me” and “Nice Work If You Can Get It” with the perfect measure of emotion. Brennan also did the show’s wonderful choreography and serves as associate artistic director.

The memory of Brennan and Hafell’s lovely singing and dancing to “Embraceable You” in the first act, and “Things Are Looking Up” in the second act, will long linger.

Supporting performances for this show are also strong, especially Patrick Wallace as saloon/hotel owner Lank Hawkins, who also has an eye for Polly, and Sarah B. Stevens as Irene Roth, Bobby’s snooty socialite New York fiancée. When Irene vamps Hawkins while singing “Naughty Baby,” it’s a solid crowd-pleaser.

A few times the laughter from the audience was so loud that it drowned out caustic quips from soft-spoken actress Abby DeRosa (Patsy), but that’s my only disappointment from this thoroughly enjoyable, well-executed show.

Don’t miss it.

Visit EncoreMichigan.com for more theater reviews.

Preview: The Ringwald Does ‘Debbie’ to Debut July 12

BY ANNE KILEY

Ferndale — Opening July 12 at The Ringwald Theatre is “Debbie Does Dallas: The Musical” that tells the famous rags-to-riches story. Debbie Benton has been invited to try out for the Dallas Cowgirl Cheerleading squad. The only problem is that she has to pay for her fare to the tryouts. Being a girl of simple means, she enlists the aid of her friends to help her raise the money and together they will do anything to get Debbie to Dallas.

Conceived by Susan L. Schwartz, adapted by Erica Schmidt and with music and lyrics by Andrew Sherman, Tom Kitt and Jonathan Calicutt, “Debbie Does Dallas: The Musical” premiered at the New York Fringe Festival and has since been performed around the world.

The Ringwald production is directed by Brandy Joe Plambeck, with music direction by Jeremy St. Martin and choreography by Mike Suchyta. Phoenix Eldridge stage manages a cast that includes Maggie Alger, Joe Bailey, Lily Belle Czartorski, Tess Hannah, Brenton Herwat, Kyle Mitchell Johnson, Brandy Joe Plambeck and Liz Schultz.

The design team features Mike Suchyta on set, Michelle Reeves Joe Plambeck and Liz Schultz. The design team features Mike Suchyta on set, Michelle Reeves Joe Plambeck and Liz Schultz.

Tickets can be purchased at TheRingwald.com or at the theatre, located at 22742 Woodward Ave. in downtown Ferndale. The Ringwald box office opens 45 minutes before performances and tickets can be purchased with cash or credit card. For more information, please call 248-545-5545.

www.PrideSource.com
Jill Soloway teams up with ‘Red Sonja’

You can probably thank “Wonder Woman” for the renewed interest in rebooting “Red Sonja,” the 1985 Brigitte Nielsen/Arnold Schwarzenegger action flop-turned-cult-film. And now that Bryan Singer’s involvement in the project has been terminated (or is that cancelled?) it was the perfect opportunity for Millennium Films to cast a vote of confidence in a female writer-director. This is, of course, what happened when they chose “Transparent” creator Jill Soloway as the person to run the show. There’s no doubt there will be an aura of queer energy coming off of this production, so suddenly we’re interested in yet another superhero movie. Casting will ramp up to find a woman to play Red Sonja – the comic book heroine of the 1970s whose stories have continued to this day – and though we have no idea who it should be, we will be on Twitter loudly complaining about any choice that isn’t Beyonce or Gaga. That’s how it works now.

‘The Prom’ dances over to Netflix

“The Prom,” the adorable queer teen Broadway show that makes audiences cheer and cry, is coming to Netflix. It’s about time, really: streaming theater makes a lot of sense for audiences who’ll never get a chance to visit New York or be able to afford the steep ticket price of most shows, and for those who can it’s a great lure to see it in person. The real reason this is happening, though, is because the Tony-nominated musical didn’t win any, and without those to boost post-award-show box office, musicals tend to close unless they’re, you know, “Beetlejuice.” Therefore, on the show’s final night, August 11, anyone with a Netflix account will get to see it before it begins its inevitable tour or medium-sized cities. Now, in case you’re unaware, “The Prom” is about two high school girls in a small town who want to go to prom together as a couple, and their battle against bigotry involves a lot of singing and dancing. And now every small town Broadway diva will get a chance to enjoy it, too.

‘Spinning Gold’ from the Casablanca story

Freddie Mercury, Elton John, and... Neil Bogart? Sure, he might not be a household name, but he was a hit-maker on an epic scale in the 1970s, that’s because Bogart ran Casablanca Records, where the roster of talent included Donna Summer, KISS, Parliament, Village People, The Isley Brothers and Gladys Knight, among many, many others. And like Elton and Freddie, the late mogul is getting a movie. Production begins July 16 in Canada on “Spinning Gold,” a film written and directed by Timothy Scott Bogart, son of the disco-boss who died in 1982 of cancer at the too-young age of 39. Bogart says the film won’t pull any punches on 70s excess, and there’s already an impressive cast assembled: Samuel L. Jackson as George Clinton, Kenan Thompson as Motown’s Berry Gordy, Jason Isaacs, Jason Derulo, Jay Pharoah, D.L. Hughley, singer Jazmine Sullivan, Neil Patrick Harris, Michelle Monaghan and Jeremy Jordan as Neil Bogart. At the moment, though, Donna Summer has yet to be cast. Now, some advice for the production, from very queer authorities on the matter: do not let anyone else sing for Summer, because no one can touch that greatness. Let them lip sync for their life.

Dee Rees: From ‘Mudbound’ to a musical

Dee Rees’ next project will be “The Kyd’s Exquisite Follies,” a musical based on her own original script. It’s kind of the perfect move, since her last feature, 2017’s “Mudbound,” earned four Academy Award nominations, and her earlier HBO biopic “Bessie” got her a couple of Emmy nominations. Why not be bold and go for it with a musical after all that? With music by Santigold, “Kyd’s” concerns a young musician from a little town called Same Ol’ Same Ol’ who leaves in search of stardom in a sparkling place called It City. And in recent press Rees has described her favorite childhood musical as “The Wiz,” so this over-the-rainbow vibe the sketchy story details conjures up must be intentional. We’re expecting great things here because we’ve loved Rees’ queer-centered stories since “Pariah,” and because there can never be enough musicals. This has been scientifically proven.

Deep Inside Hollywood

BY ROMEO SAN VICENTE

‘Spinning Gold’ from the Casablanca story

Freddie Mercury, Elton John, and... Neil Bogart? Sure, he might not be a household name, but he was a hit-maker on an epic scale in the 1970s, that’s because Bogart ran Casablanca Records, where the roster of talent included Donna Summer, KISS, Parliament, Village People, The Isley Brothers and Gladys Knight, among many, many others. And like Elton and Freddie, the late mogul is getting a movie. Production begins July 16 in Canada on “Spinning Gold,” a film written and directed by Timothy Scott Bogart, son of the disco-boss who died in 1982 of cancer at the too-young age of 39. Bogart says the film won’t pull any punches on 70s excess, and there’s already an impressive cast assembled: Samuel L. Jackson as George Clinton, Kenan Thompson as Motown’s Berry Gordy, Jason Isaacs, Jason Derulo, Jay Pharoah, D.L. Hughley, singer Jazmine Sullivan, Neil Patrick Harris, Michelle Monaghan and Jeremy Jordan as Neil Bogart. At the moment, though, Donna Summer has yet to be cast. Now, some advice for the production, from very queer authorities on the matter: do not let anyone else sing for Summer, because no one can touch that greatness. Let them lip sync for their life.

Dee Rees: From ‘Mudbound’ to a musical

Dee Rees’ next project will be “The Kyd’s Exquisite Follies,” a musical based on her own original script. It’s kind of the perfect move, since her last feature, 2017’s “Mudbound,” earned four Academy Award nominations, and her earlier HBO biopic “Bessie” got her a couple of Emmy nominations. Why not be bold and go for it with a musical after all that? With music by Santigold, “Kyd’s” concerns a young musician from a little town called Same Ol’ Same Ol’ who leaves in search of stardom in a sparkling place called It City. And in recent press Rees has described her favorite childhood musical as “The Wiz,” so this over-the-rainbow vibe the sketchy story details conjures up must be intentional. We’re expecting great things here because we’ve loved Rees’ queer-centered stories since “Pariah,” and because there can never be enough musicals. This has been scientifically proven.
PrEP Clinic
Now Open Tuesdays
10:00am-3:00pm
3011 West Grand Blvd
Suite 230
Detroit, MI 48202
313-446-9800

For more information about PrEP and prevention services please contact our Lead Prevention Specialist, Keith Hughes at Hughes@munified.org
WWW.MUNIFIED.ORG

get in care.
stay in care.
live well.

call or visit
810.232.0888
311 E. Court St.

#TIME2KNOW GET TESTED
NOW OFFERING INTEGRATED TESTING

- Rapid HIV
- Rapid Hep C
- Gonorrhea
- Chlamydia
- Syphilis

CONVENIENT METRO DETROIT LOCATIONS
Matrix MAC Health in Ferndale & MidTown Detroit • Affirmations in Ferndale

MONDAY
Tuesday
Wednesday
Thursday
Friday
Saturday

Matrix MAC Health
FERNDALE
9AM-4:30PM
By Appointment

Affirmations
FERNDALE
5:30PM-8:30PM
Walk-in or Appointment

Matrix MAC Health
FERNDALE
9AM-7:30PM
Walk-in

Matrix MAC Health
FERNDALE
9AM-4:30PM
Walk-in

Matrix MAC Health
FERNDALE
9AM-5PM
Walk-in

Mpowerment Detroit
MIDTOWN
11AM-7PM
Walk-in

Mpowerment Detroit
MIDTOWN
3rd Saturday of each month
11AM-2PM
Walk-in

Call 1.888.226.6366 to make an appointment or for information.

1(888) A CONDOM

MATRIX MAC HEALTH IS A PROGRAM OF MATRIX HUMAN SERVICES. LEARN MORE. GIVE. VOLUNTEER. DISCOVER MATRIX at MatrixHumanServices.org

www.PrideSource.com
Your Best Choice in Healthcare For All the Right Reasons

Dr. Paul Benson's Be Well Medical Center

1964 Eleven Mile Rd
Berkley, MI 48072
(248) 544-9300
doctorbewell.com

Most Experienced and Knowledgeable
Established in 1980 as the first Primary Care Medical Clinic in the Detroit area specializing in our LGBTQ community.

Board Certified in Family Practice &
Designated Patient-Centered Medical Home
by Blue Cross Blue Shield as a Center of Excellence.

We're a Recipient of the Peter M. Fox Excellence in HIV Credentialing Award from the American Academy of HIV Medicine. Also, Dr. Benson was one of the first physicians credentialed and has maintained the AAHIV-S specialist designation since.

Extensive Network of Sensitive Specialists with an ongoing relationship to refer as necessary.

There is a difference. We're a patient-friendly Private Practice small enough to individualize care by a staff that knows you and large enough to manage all of your Primary Care Needs.

- HIV Prevention (PrEP), Post Exposure Prophylaxis (PEP), STI testing & treatment
- Hormone Affirming Therapy for HIV positive and negative transgender individuals
- Evening Clinic Hours Monday-Thursday, most Saturdays, and Same Day Appointments
- Full-time Patient Navigator/Advocate Social Worker on site
- Most Insurances accepted
- Ryan White Provider
- Medcart Pharmacy on Premises
- Group Medical Appointments (available soon!)
- Tele-Medical Visits (available soon!)

Dr. Benson is an Associate Professor at Michigan State University providing training to our next generation of physicians.

He leads our team of professional and talented Providers:

- Caleb Youngblood, PA-C, AAHIV-S
- Mark Rosen, PA-C
- Leon Bullough, NP-F
- Keyuna Nance, MSW
Tito’s Lemonade & Tea

1 1/2 oz Tito’s Handmade Vodka
3 oz lemonade
3 oz iced tea
5 raspberries, optional

Just add Tito’s Handmade Vodka, lemonade, and tea to a collins glass over ice. Stir and garnish with a lemon slice.

Pro-Tip: Muddle in a few raspberries or try your favorite summer berry!